Trapped Natal Miners Found Alive

By JOE WILL

NATAL (CP) — Three tough coal miners, who told rescuers they could have lasted three weeks longer, walked into the fresh air Sunday night after being trapped for more than 80 hours in a partially-flooded mine shaft.

Rescue came just hours after officials said hope was fading rapidly.

"We knew you would get us," Donald Evans told the men who clawed their way through 68 feet of solid coal in 15 hours Sunday after tapping sounds were heard.

Donald Evans, 54, John Krall, 57, both of Natal, and Frank Kutcher, 53, of Frank, were found by rescue crews at 7:55 p.m. PDT and walked out of the mine unaided just five minutes later.

The trio told rescuers they were buffetted by rising waters in the pit but managed to stay on their feet and fight their way to dry ground in a side shaft. They said they tried five possible escape routes but were blocked by washed out timbers and collapsed tunnels.

"They were really camped in down there," said mine manager Irv Morgan. "They used sack cloth we normally use for carrying ventilation pipes in the tunnels and made beds for themselves."

He said they fixed up a roof to keep the constantly dripping water off them.

"Hell, we were holed up in there," Evans told rescuers. "We could have lasted 21 days."

They were trapped shortly before noon Thursday when a party of 10 miners was blasting the roof of a small dome 1,700 feet from the entrance to the Balmer South mine operated by Kaiser Resources Ltd. in this southeastern British Columbia town just 15 miles from the Alberta border.

The blast tore through the roof of the shaft and into older workings that had since filled up with water. The crashing rubble and water killed three other miners. Four escaped.

Rescue workers heard faint tapping sounds at about 5:15 a.m. Sunday and they and the following shift clawed their way through in less than 15 hours.

"The men went through 68 feet of solid coal—more than a two-day job—in record time," said M. F. Clemmer, spokesman for Kaiser.

He said when the three men walked from the mine it looked as if they were going to work and not coming from it.

"It was the most beautiful thing in the world."

The men were in good spirits as they left the mine.

"We knew you would come to get us," Evans said.

"Wouldn't a beer taste good," said Kutcher.

"If you're going to the Kootenay get me one," Krall said to friends as the three miners headed for the Michel-Natal Hospital for a checkup.

About 3,000 people were gathered around the mine site when the three men walked out with their rescuers.

"They are three tough men," said Mr. Morgan.

He said the men had followed a schedule of tapping every two hours to let rescuers know they were alive.

"When we heard them we thought there was at least one alive. That three would be alive and well was beyond our wildest expectations."

Rescue workers scheduled to go off duty at 4 p.m. Sunday refused to leave and stayed on until the trapped men were freed.

"We could hear a tap . . . more like a thud. We'd hear it . . . then listen . . . then we couldn't hear it," rescue worker Bill Milburn of Fernie, B.C., said today.

"We were never sure what it was. It was never clear that it was someone banging," he said.

But it was enough to send the rescue workers to driving a 70-foot shaft through solid coal to the trapped men. The feverish last effort by the rescuers took 12 hours; drilling, blasting and removing debris.

As the last few feet were cleared away, Mr. Morgan, underground superintendent James Anderson and pit boss Arnold Webster were the first to CLOUD OF TEAR GAS is sprayed among demonstrators by policeman at Quebec Saturday as other officers moved in to disperse crowd at the Union Nationale party leadership convention. More than 3,000 protestors marched on the convention centre.

Bertrand Victorious After Violent Meet

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand was confirmed Saturday as Union Nationale party leader.

Delegates gave him a 389-vote margin over Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal during a weekend convention marred by demonstrations, bombings and charges of election-rigging.

Mr. Bertrand, interim leader since Daniel Johnson's death last fall, polled 1,327 against 938 votes for Mr. Cardinal. Twenty two votes went to Andre Leveille, a Montreal back-bencher.

Three violence incidents marked the arrival Friday of more than 2,000 delegates from Quebec's 108 ridings—a Molotov cocktail set furniture afire in a hotel lobby, a gunpowder bomb exploded in a mail box and two cars were set on fire.

Then Saturday, a few hours before the voting, the 30,000-member Quebec Civil Service Union marched on the convention site at the Coliseum. A two-hour skirmish between police and about 3,000 rock-throwing demonstrators ended when the marchers were sprayed with tear-gas. Three policemen were injured.

Police said 33 demonstrators were charged with disturbing the peace.

Cultural Affairs Minister Jean-Noel Tremblay, a strong supporter of Mr. Cardinal and a well-known Quebec nationalist, said after the vote that Mr. Bertrand's election had been rigged.

He charged at a news conference that the premier's campaign organizers had purchased votes and "the Mafia was there with money to threaten and to influence delegates."

Mr. Tremblay, who is prepared to work in Mr. Bertrand's cabinet "if he wants me", said two students told him they had been offered $1,000 each plus summer jobs at $100 a week if they voted for the premier.

He added that he was sure Mr. Bertrand was unaware of this and mentioned the name of a "notorious Montreal gangster" reported to be in town for the three-day convention.

GREAT VICTORY

"We won a great victory because our leader (Mr. Cardinal) collected 42 per cent of the ballots despite a rigged vote," Mr. Tremblay said.

In his victory speech, Premier Bertrand said it is important "to pull in the elbows because united we will win and we will defeat the opposition in the next election."

Mr. Cardinal said later he is prepared to remain in the party to fight for the ideas he endorsed during his leadership campaign "if our partisans think I can serve Quebec."

But the Cardinal cheering section in the 10,000-seat Coliseum wasn't very enthusiastic. Boos as well as insults greeted Mr. Bertrand as he walked up to the podium to appeal for party unity.

A group of Cardinal supporters, including the late Premier Daniel Johnson's 22-year-old son, Marc, indicated they would leave the party and join Rene Levesque's separatist Party Quebecois.

Phone Workers Out, Island Unaffected

A strike which sent more than 3,000 telephone workers off the job at lower mainland exchanges from Hope to Squamish at the weekend has not yet affected Victoria.

Island operations of B.C. Telephone could be affected, however, depending on progress toward settlement with the striking Federation of B.C. Telephone Workers.

The strike was called for the lower mainland at 6:30 a.m. today after contract negotiations collapsed Saturday.

First pickets appeared at 6:40 a.m. at the B.C. Telephone plant in suburban New Westminster, and within 30 minutes switchboard operators in downtown Vancouver and two other operations left their posts.

The strike is a rotation affair, the union has said, meaning only some employees walk off the job at first, while the remainder continue to work.

Later the strikers will return to work and the others will leave their jobs.

As switchboard operators left their places this morning and those coming on shift refused to cross the picket lines, supervisory personnel took their places to maintain service.

A similar process would likely take place in Victoria should the strike spread to this region, said Glynn Jones, area spokesman for B.C. Telephone.

"The federation has not yet given us any indication as to what they plan to do next, but the strike has not so far affected Victoria or any part of the Island.

"The union has indicated, however, that any strike here would be on a rotation bases. Supervisory personnel are being used effectively on the mainland, and have been alerted they would be used the same way here to maintain service," Jones said.

Troops Cut By Canada

Reduction Over 3 Years

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Leo Cadieux announced today that Canada's armed forces will be reduced to a strength of 80,000 to 85,000 during the next three years. Present strength is about 98,000.

Mr. Cadieux told the Commons that the government will concentrate wherever possible on reducing administrative and support activities to provide a higher ratio of operational to non-operational personnel than in the past.

This entails a re-examination of command and control activities with a view to reducing the headquarters staff, including that in Ottawa.

Mr. Cadieux said it is planned to reach the new manpower levels without introducing a program of forced attrition.

"We fully recognize that this will result in some temporary personnel imbalances within certain trades and specialties, but we are confident these can be overcome by making available opportunities for retraining."

Maritime Command will continue in the anti-submarine role, using most of the existing equipment, he informed the House.

CONSIDER MORE STEPS

However, the government was considering a replacement aircraft for the sub-hunting Argus, now operating from Maritimes bases.

The possibility of widening the roles open to maritime forces was being explored "in response to the government's policy directive."

"In particular, we expect more emphasis will be placed on activities relating to Canadian sovereign interests in our adjacent waters, and the sea bed," said Mr. Cadieux.

"In this context our Arctic territories take on particular significance."

Mobile Command will continue to be organized in combat groups and the Canadian airborne regiment, kept on standby in Canada for possible use abroad under the United Nations, is being retained.

STOCK SALES TUMBLE TOWARD RECORD LOWS

The Toronto Stock Market plunged toward a record drop for trading in one day late this afternoon.

The industrial index was down 5.41 by mid-afternoon.

Markets elsewhere also declined significantly.

France to Keep Independent Line

PARIS (AP)—Maurice Schumann, France's new foreign minister. dampened today any idea that his appointment might mean a change in the policies of Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

"The foreign policy defined by the founder of the Fifth Republic will be carried out by the new government," Schumann told the opening of a world medical assembly. He said this policy, based on the independence of France and of Europe, served the peace of the world.

Schumann, 58, once resigned from a Gaullist government after De Gaulle rejected British entry into the Common Market without telling his ministers in advance. But Schumann, known as the voice of France on BBC during the war years, later reconciled with de Gaulle and took another ministerial job in 1967.

The new cabinet, appointed Sunday by President Georges Pompidou on the recommendation of Premier Jacques Chaban-Delmas, meets for the first time today at Elysee Palace.

Schumann succeeds Michel Debre, a hard and pure Gaullist. Debre had wished to remain at the foreign ministry to oversee execution of De Gaulle's ideas, but as a compromise finally agreed to become defence minister. In his new job, Debre is No. 2 man to Chaban-Delmas.

There are those who thought Schumann's appointment, and that of Valery Giscard d'Estaing as finance minister, heralded the beginning of a new liberal era in French foreign policy.

DID NOT BREAK

One of the co-founders of the now-defunct Mouvement Republicain Populaire, a Roman Catholic party that sought European unity after the Second World War, Schumann strongly disapproved of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's decision to keep Britain out of the Common Market. But he never broke with the general over it.

Giscard d'Estaing had been finance minister under De Gaulle from January, 1962, to January, 1966, but then helped form a splinter group called Independent Republicans who said they were basically for De Gaulle but reserved the right to disagree with him.

Giscard d'Estaing is known to favor both British entry into the Common Market and political integration in Europe. He took the job after former premier Antoine Pinay, also an Independent Republican, turned it down Saturday despite Pompidou's urging.

Sprinter Smith More Human Than Symbol

By STEVE HUME

Symbols, especially when they are people, have a disturbing way of becoming more human the nearer you get to them.

Tommie Smith, Black Power athlete who got bounced from the U. S. Olympic team for advocating from the Mexico City victory stand the social philosophy that has millions of white Americans quaking in their boots, lost a big chunk of his fire-breathing image Saturday.

He showed up to run the Y-Times International 220-yard dash looking like someone modelling the latest thing in sweatsuits for a Playboy magazine take-out, and he left looking just as cool and unruffled.

In between he managed to sign autographs, talk with a gaggle of awed youngsters hanging around from morning age-class competition, slip in an official introduction to the crowd, and tie Harry Jerome's existing meet record with a fluid ease that stunned the 2,000 spectators at Centennial Stadium.

Warming up among the rank and file athletes, his blue Pan Am Games sweatsuit holding no measure of anonymity, he looked like a thoroughbred, rangy, loose, packed with latent speed and capable of a world record any time he wanted one.

But he didn't come on like the aloof, taut, high-strung stereotype of a super-star is supposed to act.

He had a genial grin for anyone who spoke to him, and time to talk with kids, coaches, officials and fans alike.

When he sauntered up to the meet recorder and asked with an easy smile, "So who've we got to run with me?" nobody took it as the supercilious insult of a super-athlete at a provincial track meet.

It was rhetorical question, nothing more, for it didn't really matter who was running in the race.

And when the 25-year-old, 180-pound athlete got onto the track with his red and blue U.S. singlet and shorts, everyone knew it was a rhetorical question.

Smith looked almost lazy coming out of the fourth lane blocks with a relaxed stride and loose arm-motion.

Then, halfway through the turn his knees came up and he exploded into a blinding acceleration that left 9.5 hundred sprinter Larry Matthews of Tacoma floundering 10 yards behind.

It was an incredible burst of speed reminiscent of last year's Olympic Preview

Bank Rate Rise Sparks Inquiry

By GEORGE LARDNER, Jr.

WASHINGTON (WP) — The justice department disclosed Saturday that it has started an intensive anti-trust investigation of the sharp rise in prime interest rates charged by the nation's banks.

Richard W. McLaren, the Nixon Administration's anti-trust chief, said his division was checking not only this month's increase in the prime rate—from 7½ to 8½ per cent — but was also "digging into the four (other) increases which occurred since last December."

So far, he told the House Banking and Currency Committee, the reports he has received would not warrant grand jury action, But he emphasized that the investigation is not yet complete.

"The antitrust division," McLaren said, "has not hesitated in the past to prosecute banks on conspiracy charges and if the evidence justifies it, we will not hesitate to bring charges again."

Committee chairman Wright Patman (D-Tex.) said he strongly suspected collusion. "It looks like a very clear case of tracking an elephant through the snow," he told McLaren.

Collusion Denied by Banks

Virtually all the major banks in the country raised their prime rate—the interest for loans to their biggest and best customers—a full percentage point June 9. It was, McLaren said, the largest single jump and resulted in "the highest rate in our history."

In testimony before Patman's committee Friday, executives of the two New York City banks that led the way denied acting in concert and said the decisions were independent, even though they came only minutes apart that Monday morning.

They blamed the increase on underlying economic pressures.

Complaining that the cost of money has jumped 36 per cent since last December, Patman maintained that the most recent hike would cost borrowers $15 billion a year, an estimate that he based on the total outstanding public and private debt of $1.5 trillion.

He called the justice department investigation "a good start," but voiced his disappointment in the Nixon Administration's decision not to press for a rollback.

Besides pushing for an antitrust investigation, Patman had also asked President Nixon in a June 9 letter to denounce the new 8½ per cent rate publicly and apply other pressures, such as having the Federal Reserve selectively "close its discount windows" through which member banks can get short-term, 6 per cent loans.

Committee Checking Bank Records

In a response made public at the hearing, presidential assistant Bryce N. Harlow said the administrtion doubted that Patman's proposals would work. "Essentially," Harlow wrote, "the current level of interest rates reflects market forces."

McLaren testified that the circumstances of the last increase seemed "different enough" from those of the past to warrant an antitrust investigation, however.

The assistant attorney general said his economists have told him that "economic factors could fully account for the increase." But, he added, this does not necessarily rule out collusion.

Investigators, he said, have already been dispatched to interview bankers in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and San Francisco.

He said his men have been told to seek out all pertinent documents in bank files, including the notes and memoranda of bak executives, press releases and minutes of board meetings.

They have also been assigned to ferret out "any occasions when interest rates may have been discussed among two or more competitive bankers—however informal or whatever the occasion."

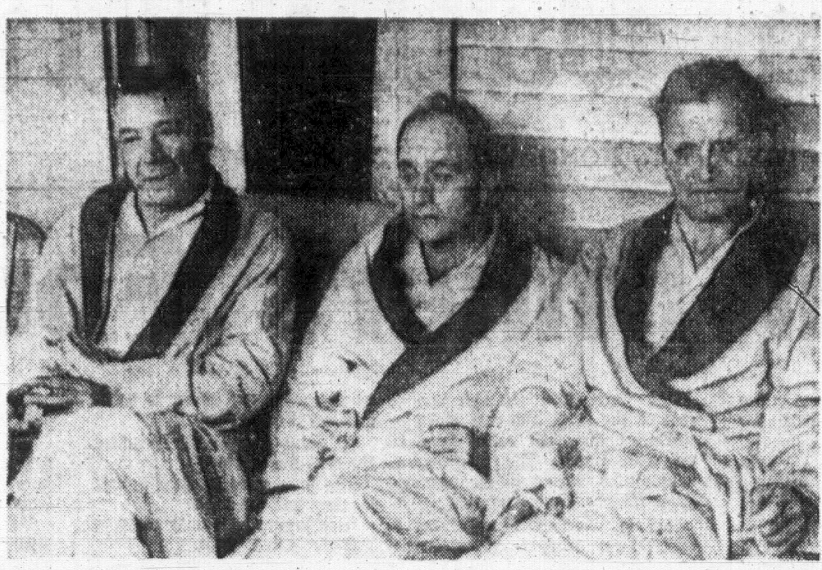
The latest increase itself was not a surprise, but the size of it was.

The Bankers Trust Co. of New York, Patman recounted, announced its new prime rate at 9:16 a.m. June 9, according to the Dow-Jones wire.

The First National City Bank of New York did the same 34 minutes later. Within a few hours, almost all the major banks in the country had gone up to 8½ per cent.

Patman said he found it hard to understand why some banks failed to stop at 8 or 8¼ per cent. Even in the highly concentrated steel industry, he said, "it takes a few days or sometimes a few weeks for the entire industry to fall in line on a price increase."

In other testimony before the committee Saturday, Sen. William Proxmire (D-Wis.) charged that "the real blame lies with the Federal Reserve Board" for letting the large banks undermine the administration's battle against inflation.



MINERS RESCUED after being trapped for more than 80 hours in a water-filled shaft at Natal, B.C., relax in hospital. The three, left to right, John Kroll, 57; Frank Kutcher, 54, and Don Evans, 54, apparently were in satisfactory condition and said they could have spent three weeks in the shaft. (CP Wirephoto.)

. . . TRAPPED MINERS

see the trapped men. They were braced against the far wall of their prison to escape the last blast which was set off six feet from the area in which they were imprisoned.

The trapped men were not in complete darkness; their safety lamps were still functioning. They were led back through the four-foot square cross cut into the main drift.

MINERS WEARY

"They looked real good. But they were a little weary all right," Mr. Milburn said.

"I talked to them . . . to Krall and Kutcher . . . they didn't say anything about food. They said the cold and the damp was the worst.

"One of them said they figured it would take until this morning for us to get to them. They could hear the shots (dynamite explosions). They could hear us coming."

When news of the tapping reached Natal and Michel, families of the miners and other townspeople clustered north of Michel Creek on an embankment that gave a full view of the mine entrance.

A cheer rose from the crowd when the three rescued men appeared.

The miners were taken immediately to the Michel-Natal Hospital, a half-mile east of here in Michel and were visited by their families before they were put under sedation.

"There will be no talking to them tonight," said Mrs. I. Caruso, the administrator of the hospital. She said there was "nothing too much" wrong with them and that they seemed "in very good condition considering the time they spent underground."

Mr. Clemmer said the main reason for their apparently good condition was their experience underground "and the fact they had a little faith in the men coming to get them."

After visiting her husband in hospital, Frank Kutcher's wife was definite about one thing.

"That's the last time my old man's going into a coal mine," she said. Interviewed at her home in Frank, she said she and the two of their four children at home with her learned before the rescue the good news about the tapping sound.

"It was my husband tapping on a pipe . . . an electric pipe for the electric cords," she said. "They were all in water, this is all I can say. He said he was up to his neck in water and they were holding on to timbers and pulling themselves up all the way."

Bruce Kutcher, 15, one of Frank Kutcher's sons, backed up his mother when she said her husband wasn't going back into the mine.

"I told him that when he came out of the mine tonight and he didn't agree," Bruce said. "But we'll stop him."

"I'm so happy," said Katherine Evans, the mother of Donald Evans' 10 children. "I'm so happy."

She also said she didn't want her husband back in a mine. "No . . . not underground."

But John Krall has other ideas. Mr. Morgan said that the first thing Mr. Krall told him when he got out of the mine was that he would be back on the job today.

The discovery of the men at a time when hope was fading was reminiscent of the Springhill disaster in Nova Scotia, 11 years ago.

Seventy-four miners died when a bump shattered the pits and trapped 174 others. Many made their way to safety but six days later, when hope was almost gone, rescue crews broke through and found 12 alive. In another two days, seven more were found alive in different parts of the workings.

Phone Call Brings Word To Sister

DALLAS (UPI) — Mrs. Johnny Thompson of Dallas learned about the death of her sister, Judy Garland, when a friend telephoned her Sunday.

Mrs. Thompson was at her doctor's today. But her husband said it had nothing to do with her sister's death.

Mrs. Thompson was one of two of Judy Garland's sisters. The other was named Susie. Susie died several years ago.

Thompson said the last time all three sisters were together was in Las Vegas just before Susie died.

Susie was the oldest of the Gumm sisters. Mrs. Thompson was the middle sister and Judy, who used the stage name of "Garland," was the youngest.

It left you realizing that Smith has the distinct advantage of being one of those black Americans who, no matter how you look at it, and despite the condemnation of his politics by the U.S. sports establishment, is already more than just equal.

Articulate and adept, the soft-spoken graduate of San Jose State University where militancy among black athletes was born, is current holder of eight world track records. He has held 11 simultaneously.

WHITES INTIMIDATED

And watching him in action you know why overweight, middle-aged white Americans are intimidated and afraid of potent athletes like Smith and the social changes they demand.

You also realize he's human first and symbol second.

He said Saturday could be his last track meet.

Professional sport in the form of contract negotiations with the Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League beckons, and if, like many other Olympic sprint stars, pro football in the States proves too tough, there are the B.C. Lions in the Canadian league.

After all, he's gone about as far as any man can go in track and field.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Planners of the new cities that are going to take the place of the crowded, hot urban hodgepodges of 1969 are at drawing boards right now trying to create more places for parks.

Especially in the large eastern cities are parks necessary—both for recreation and at least a little outdoor living and for cooler environment in the summer.

Although the tainted city air is hard on trees, stunting their browth and sometimes choking them to slow death, trees do a little better in parks than they do on boulevards. One reason is that the extra heat from pavement and buildings is absent in parks where the grass and growing things cool off the heated air.

Just as plants do better in parks, so do people. The reason comes in two parts: first, it is psychological. A terribly hot day in a canyon of buildings becomes at least bearable in the park, whether or not breezes blow there. Second, the shade in the park is cooler than the shade given off by th Empire State Building, for example.

Convention Rhetoric Drowned by Noise

By DAVE BAZAY

QUEBEC (CP) — The governing Union Nationale party's leadership convention during the weekend might have happened anywhere in North America.

It happaned in the French language, naturally, but you had to look hard to find anything "exclusivement Quebecois."

Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal's campaign literature described him as "the leader of a young nation" and Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand talked about "le peuple quebecois" and referred to Quebec as "a nation."

But when you listen to the way their followers sing Hello Dolly it's pretty difficult to take this rhetoric seriously.

There were many brass bands, posters and policemen—and little discussion of issues.

A 21-year-old girl from the Magdalen Islands, a haven of peace and quiet in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, summed up her impressions by saying:

"It's hard on the ears."

A woman from Sept-Iles who would have liked to have seen more talk about "real things" said: "Frankly the convention was overdone."

The question of Quebec's relations with Canada was only a side-issue and Mr. Cardinal didn't even talk about the constitutional question in his convention speech.

There was a shallow discussion of parliamentary reform by both major candidates, who quickly realized people are bored by constitutional squabbling.

Mr. Cardinal offered to make the party an open constitutional bag with room for everyone from "les separatistes" to "les anglais."

This made him appealing to young people who in any case, found it easier to identify with the 44-year-old Montrealer than with the old-fashioned premier.

There was the feeling in young minds that "if Canada has its Pierre Elliott Trudeau, we can have our Jean-Guy Cardinal."

The Trudeau thing worked on the pro-Cardinal crowd in the stands of the 10,000-seat Coliseum, but the mania didn't grab the voting delegates.

Mr. Bertrand fought Mr. Cardinal by saying he is prepared to propose a presidential system of government by way of a referendum.

Both candidates paid lip service to the presidential system, but neither elaborated in detail how it would work in the Canadian context.

But if this aspect has not been discussed perhaps it is because of the feeling in the party that what Quebec does about its own institutions is none of Canada's business.

This, to return to the rhetoric of Quebec politics, is what is meant by "the right to self-determination of the French-Canadian nation."

Quebec Meet Reflects American Similarities

The following analysis of the Union Nationale convention, which ended in Quebec City Saturday, was written by United States political commentator George Lardner, Jr. Lardner, by virtue of his personal detachment from the issue at stake in the convention, was able to present a perspective on Canada more subjective than those published by domestic writers.

QUEBEC—There's nothing like a band playing "When the Saints Go Marching In" against a backdrop of political banners in French to emphasize that there are more similarities than differences in North America, irrespective of language.

The issues at the leadership conference of the Union Nationale party in Quebec's Coliseum were mainly of provincial concern; and, because of the parliamentary system here, the techniques were not identical to those at political conventions in the United States.

But the slogans, the demonstrations, the noise of the various drum and bugle corps, the welcome diversion of a mini-skirted band replete with girl trombonists and xylophonists—these would have made an American politician feel quite at home.

Actually, Quebec, and Canada generally, have in large measure adopted U.S. political trappings. Even the opening speech, with a few adaptations for particular issues, followed the same general pattern of campaign extravagance.

English Canada's effort to promote genuine bilingualism have often brought bitter smiles in Quebec. French-Canadians say with some ascerbity that they have had to learn English in order to compete economically but that this has been strictly a one-way street.

Nevertheless, may serious attempts to overcome the deficiencies are visible in Ottawa. Young civil servants of English background are being sent to French Canada for study.

A useful delegate to the Union Nationale convention complains that there is too much stress on separatism of independence for Quebec. He is an immigrant who came to Canada from Czechoslovakia at the age of seven and, he says, is well on his way toward making his first million dollars.

Some of the separatist talk, he maintains, is stirred up by Communist spirit. The "kids," he says, are attracted by separatism but the more "mature" voters will reject it.

Whether anything Ottawa does will be sufficient to conciliate the more activist young people in Quebec province, however, remains an open question.

A conservative politician predicts soberly that the separatists will gain control in the second general election by 1975.

Some young Quebec civil servants argue that French Canada can never find fulfilment short of independence, that English Canada will never understand and that the conciliation effort even by the Trudeau government in Ottawa comes too late.

"Frankly, we've had it," said one, expressing admiration for the tactic of the late premier Daniel Johnson in acting first to annoy Ottawa and then negotiating. "We simply don't care what Ottawa does."

Because hard facts often alter wishful thinking, separatism is not necessarily the wave of the future. One gets the impression that it is partly a game and that some of the Quebec residents simply enjoy a dispute with the federal government.

But there can be no doubt that separatist talk is widespread and that it is causing serious worry to some political leaders here as well as in Ottawa.

DIVERSITY ASSET—PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today the future of Canada "counts on the resources and dynamism of French-speaking Canadians."

In his message on the occasion of the feast of St. Jean Baptiste, French Canada's patron saint, Mr. Trudeau said: "Canada will not be Canada and will not be able to fulfil its promises if the diversity which characterizes it does not reach its fullness . . .

"The feast of St. Jean Baptiste is synonymous with pride and progress not only for French-speaking citizens but for all of Canada."

The prime minister said the French fact is not only being accepted but "welcomed and encouraged".

To build a new nation, based on the "fraternity of two great linguistic communities" Canadians must show "initiative, courage and will".

Pill Ban Resisted

NEW YORK (AP) — A mail survey of Roman Catholic priests by McCall's magazine showed five of seven priests under 40 oppose the Pope's birth control pronouncement, the magazine said Sunday.

The magazine said it received replies from 700 priests. It did not say how many questionnaires it mailed out.

Among priests over 50 who answered the questionnaire, only one of eight opposed the birth control edict.

Essentially Moderate

IN RETURNING PREMIER BERTRAND as leader of the Union Nationale Party of Quebec by a handy 400-vote majority, his supporters appear to have made a strong bid for Canadian unity and against separatism. But it should not be overlooked that Mr. Bertrand's main opponent, Mr. Cardinal, proved that he has a sizable following—and he welcomed even separatists into his fold.

In an odd last-minute move, too, Mr. Bertrand felt himself forced to make a gesture toward the strongly nationalistic element in the province by promising a referendum on the question of establishing a presidential system of government—an apparent impossibility unless the BNA Act is drastically altered.

But the move indicated the strength of the urge in Quebec to break away from the parliamentary system as we know it. And the Union Nationale, it should be remembered, is the conservative party of Quebec—these nationalistic elements are members of a party which basically has been strongly pro-Quebec, but not extremist.

The big question, with Mr. Bertrand confirmed as leader, is whether he can win the next election—possibly next year. In this test he has two hurdles; he must convince a majority of the province's voters that his relatively moderate approach to provincial and national affairs is the best for Quebec; and he must close the gap which Mr. Cardinal's vigorous campaign helped to open in the party's ranks.

That split was not healed by the post-election speeches of the candidates. Although Mr. Bertrand called for unity, it was noticeable that Mr. Cardinal was less than whole-hearted in his promise to stay in the party. He did not once mention the victor by name, and he made it plain that he would continue to fight for the issues which he had raised during the leadership campaign—and these will certainly complicate Mr. Bertrand's policy making efforts.

Part of the seriousness of the party split lies in the fact that it is based largely on vital differences of opinion regarding separatism, or at least the more extreme forms of nationalism. And a party which is split on such a question in Quebec today is open to raiding both by its moderate opponents on the one hand, and the extremist separatists on the other. It is not a question on which a leader can hope to find complete unanimity of opinion among his party members. Already a number of Union Nationale officers and rankers are expected to resign.

While maintaining a pro-Confederation stand—a strong Quebec within a united Canada—Mr. Berstrand has had to make concessions to the separatist element, for not to do so in Quebec at this point would be to court political oblivion. But his device of the referendum is fraught with problems—and could get out of hand. And his proposal of a republican form of government within the framework of a constitutional monarchy seems to be little more than a campaign gesture.

But with all these qualifications, Mr. Bertrand's victory may be interpreted with some optimism by the rest of Canada. He is on record as being pro-Confederation, and this tends to relegate the separatists to the extremist splinter parties working on a minority basis.

Phew!

IF NEWSPAPERS CARRIED REPORTS that children were advised to stay off Hillside Avenue between Quadra and Douglas Streets, detour Government Street from Belleville to Humboldt, and avoid Yates Street throughout its downtown length, because the ditches along the sides of the thoroughfares were filled with sewage and likely to be dangerous to health, the public might be expected to do something about cleaning up the mess.

If drivers were told to avoid half a dozen of the main streets of the city centre because the dust was so thick that it constituted a hazard to life and limb; or if pedestrians were advised that they should stay away from View Street, Douglas, Fort and Broad because the mud was so deep that it was dangerous to health — then there might be an outcry and demands for improvement of the situation. Such conditions might conceivably have applied a century or more ago when Victoria was still in the pioneer village category. But as soon as they could the people did something about it.

How is it, then, that in the summer of 1969, the local press must carry an official listing of some of the choice waterfront areas of the community, posting them as out of bounds because of sewage pollution? How can that happen and people take it as a routine annual announcement? The only "news" in the description of the 28 beaches and seafront areas that are polluted to the point of being a danger to health is that five of them are new this year.

Have we become so complacent about living under such conditions that we accept passively the fact that our youngsters cannot even wade in the sea because we have poisoned much of it along our shores? We would deplore similar conditions in an African village or an Asian harbor, on the grounds that the people were backward and didn't care. How then do we assess our own acceptance of similar conditions?

Of course, we tell ourselves, we know better, because we learned about sanitation in school and we have medical experts and sanitary engineers to advise us. Yet we are still conducting weary arguments about whether we should do something about the core of the problem, or continue to muddle along with partial remedies and pious hopes. Meanwhile the population increases, the sewage volume multiplies, the "polluted area" postings go up, and the list gets longer each year.

Legalizing the Vigilantes

THOUGHTFUL AMERICANS are showing increasing concern over Nebraska's new ultra-tough self-defence law and wondering to what extent the attitude it represents may spread across their country. It has been briefly described as a law that would allow any citizen to use any means to protect himself, his family or another person from "imminent danger of criminal attack" and remove the risks to the citizen of placing himself in legal jeopardy for his action.

The law has been described by the state governor as "legalized murder," but his attempt to veto it was over-ridden by the legislature.

There should be little inclination for a civilized society to take the position that "anything goes" in the name of self-defence. On the other hand, if violence continues or increases, more and more people may be inclined to take the law into their own hands. Is this to mark a revival of the vigilante tradition in which reprisal for lawlessness became as repugnant as the lawlessness itself?

CAN I PLAY TOO?
OF COURSE, OLD CHAP; PRETEND YOU'RE A LARGE DEFENCE BUDGET.

Restore Controls

The well worn dictum that "those who ignore the past are compelled to relive it" seems to be as true today as ever.

The writer is one of many who remember the days of torpor, inaction and unemployment immediately prior to the Second World War.

Came the holocaust, and the resultant state of emergency throughout the Western world, with full employment and full production for Canada, save for those who went to war and gave all that they had.

Men and women who had never seen salt water before came to this coast and learned to build ships. Very good ships they were. They were paid union wages, rates negotiated between the unions and the Federal government, and many lived in houses built at the instance of that government, at rents which they could afford to pay.

Today, in B.C. there is more labour unrest and discontent than prevailed throughout Canada during the war years. Our constantly revamped cost of living index bears witness to the statisticians' inability to keep pace with rising costs.

While prices and profits continue to soar, this unrest will continue and probably increase. The moment that prices are controlled and profits curbed, the unions will review their position on wage increases.

Neither Mr. Benson nor Mr. Basford can fool us about inflation, or the way to stop it. Canada coped with it very successfully when the federal government had to, and controls are needed now.

Inflation is a built-in disease of the capitalist system, caused by lack of public control of the price structure. Its main victims are the consumers who are charged prices out of all proportion to the cost of production or processing of the goods they need, to live in today's complex world. — F. J. Bevis, 601 Richmond.

Excessive Water Use

The morning after severe watering restrictions were broadcast I saw hundreds of gallons of our precious water being sprayed over the long boulevard on both sides of the street on which I live. I pass the Parliament Buildings every morning where sprayers are using vast quantities of water daily. Suppose our boulevards do turn a little brown in this serious drought, will it be the end of the world? Gardeners who very naturally do not want to see their whole season's work wasted will simply be inclined to use twice as much water on open days. Only the thoughtful horticulturists will obey the necessary orders for restraint.

I want to remind all householders that their toilets use five or six gallons of water every time they are flushed. Our beautifully soft pure water is cheap and I see it woefully wasted every day.—A Disheartened Gardener.

The Formula for Change Comes Later

IN reply to questions posed by Mr. Stanfield last week, the prime minister has made plain the government's view that the problem of a formula to amend the BNA Act should be postponed until agreement has been reached on matters of substance engaging the parties to the present constitutional review. Unless the provinces request a change, the federal government has no intention of presenting its own views of the mechanics of change until that stage has been reached.

Western

There are strong arguments in favor of Mr. Trudeau's course; not the least of them the very long history of the quest for an acceptable formula of amendment in Canada. This in fact goes back to 1926. It is at least a reasonable assumption that there must be something wrong with a method that has failed for four decades to produce tangible results.

In theory, it ought to be easier to agree on the means of change than on change itself. This was a favorite theme of the late Mr. Guy Favreau who managed for a limited time to persuade all the premiers that it was possible, through the Fulton-Favreau formula to patriate the constitution without in any way altering its substance. Critics pointed out that it would in fact suffer a sea change in its passage from Britain and this consideration eventually led the Lesage government to abandon the project when success appeared almost in sight.

Not Simply Bad Luck

It was not simply bad luck that caused one attempt after another, from the time of Mr. Ernest Lapointe to that of Mr. Favreau, to end in disaster. On each occasion, some provincial governments have been ardent for constitutional change; others have regarded change with profound suspicion.

Quebec has been in each camp. For many years it held to a very conservative position, insisting on all sorts of safeguards which could be written into an amending formula only at the price of making change far more difficult than it is under the present arrangements. With the Quiet Revolution, however, Quebec became a partisan of change and many in that province came to regard Fulton-Favreau as an obstacle to the attainment of their new objectives.

The case of Fulton-Favreau is particularly instructive because it began with agreement (none too enthusiastic in the case of one or two provinces) and ended with disagreement. It was not too difficult for premiers, shutting out all other considerations, to reach an apparently innocuous accord on a formula for effecting various categories of change of various combinations of governments.

For example, certain amendments affecting one province might be brought about by action of the federal government and that province; others, of more general application, might call for the assent of two-thirds of the provinces with 50 per cent of the population of Canada, and so on.

But time created difficulties. For it was natural that on reflection the various governments would come to dwell less on categories than on particular cases. In addition, their attention would be directed to hypothetical situations. After all, times change and assent given today to an amending formula might mean trouble later in some matter particularly affecting the province concerned. There was particular concern about built-in vetoes, especially as the amending formula itself would be rigidly protected, with the result that a double barrier to change might eventually have to be hurdled.

Mr. Trudeau, perhaps with these experiences in mind, is currently attempting the alternative approach. There can be no guarantee that this will work and he has never claimed any such thing. But since the older method ended in frustration it is surely sensible to try the other.

Some of the issues of substance have now been defined and at least partially explored; others must be taken up as the work proceeds. If a general consensus can be reached, doubtless through hard bargaining, on what the 11 governments wish to place in the constitution, the necessity of amendment will be pushed back in time and it may, in the new circumstances, be possible to agree on a method of effecting future change.

This will certainly not eliminate all difficulties since it is likely that some provinces, especially in the West, will retain their traditional distrust of vetoes. But there is at least a good chance that the ancient barrier will finally crumble if there is over-all agreement on the substance of constitutional change.

FROM WASHINGTON

By RICHARD PURSER

Lindsay and the Winds From the Right

THE stunning defeats of Mayor John V. Lindsay and former mayor Robert F. Wagner in last week's Republican and Democratic mayoralty primaries in New York City give the strongest evidence to date that the rightward movement in the United States is becoming a gallop. Ever since the combined right-of-centre vote for Richard Nixon and George Wallace ruined the presidential hopes of liberal Democrat Hubert Humphrey last November, liberals have been luckless at the polls. The big test will not come until a number of liberal congressmen in both parties face re-election next year, but in the meantime conservatives are paving the way for themselves in Congress by a series of victories in the cities.

Purser

First came the re-election of Mayor Sam Yorty in Los Angeles on May 27, then the victory of Charles Stenvig in the Minneapolis mayoralty contest on June 10, and finally the overthrow of New York City's liberal establishment last Tuesday.

Barring a miracle, the city in November will break with tradition by electing a conservative mayor. He will be either city controller Mario Procaccino, conservative Democrat who defeated the come-back bid of Mr. Wagner, who had retired voluntarily four years ago after 12 years as mayor, or state Senator John Marchi, conservative Republican representing the city's most bucolic borough of Staten Island, who set back and possibly ruined Mayor Lindsay's once promising political career.

Liberal Hopes

The primary votes were scarcely counted before the liberal establishment started talking about the miracle that could keep Mr. Lindsay in office. Traditional Democrat-Republican politics are given added flavor in New York by that state's liberal and conservative parties, and Mr. Lindsay is assured of a place on the ballot in November as a candidate of the liberal party, which has given him its endorsement. He is talking now of forming a new party in addition, partly to give himself top spot in two columns on the voting machine to match Mr. Marchi (who has conservative party as well as Republican endorsement). And partly to enable his running mates for city controller and city council president, who won their own Republican primaries Tuesday, to appear in the same column as himself at least somewhere on the ballot.

Some figures give hope to the liberals even in their initial defeat. First is the fact that Mr. Procaccino, although he came first in a field of five candidates for the Democratic mayoral nomination, won only a minority of the total vote — some 252,000 against a combined vote of some 517,000 for the others, all of whom are liberals. The Democratic party, it is reasoned, is still over-whelmingly liberal in New York City, and in November the conservative rather than the liberal vote will be split, with Mr. Lindsay as the only liberal on the ballot.

Could Bolt Ranks

Second is the fact that New York has 2,300,000 registered Democratic voters as against 628,000 Republicans. While a majority of the city's Republicans are to the right of Mayor Lindsay, the Democrats will bolt ranks (as they did four years ago) to elect him.

It is a plausible scenario. But one's hunch, sensing the mood of the country and weighing the concrete evidence from the hinterland, is that it is just not in the cards during this present state of national malaise that a sufficient number of people will reach for the unfamiliar liberal party lever just to keep the establishment in power. The establishment is everywhere getting the boot. The same day it got its first taste of the boot in New York City the conservative party candidate for mayor of Buffalo, at the other end of the state, also won the Republican nomination away from an organization liberal.

The urban establishment — a term loosely used to cover the traditional power structure of civic activists, top businessmen, financiers and politicians, and leaders of the communications industry — went around predicting the defeats of Mr. Yorty and Mr. Stenvig. The record it will be playing about Mr. Lindsay's upcoming victory in November will be well cracked.

Just as the Los Angeles Times fiercely lamanted the victory of Mayor Yorty, so the New York Times went to work on Mr. Marchi and Mr. Procaccino. The Marchi victory, it said, was a tragedy for the Republican party and a victory by the most backward-looking reactionary forces in the city. The Procaccino victory it called a disgrace to the Democratic party. And it predicted that his election (for he now must be considered the front runner) would be a disaster for the city.

"Law and Order"

One doesn't know ehther it would be or not, since Mr. Procaccino has not yet told the voters his plans for handling the city's massive education, welfare, health and housing problems. Like his predecessors in Los Angeles and Minneapolis, he campaigned on the sole issue of "law and order," giving it the usual thinly disguised racial overtones.

However reprehensible the technique, it obviously works with the voters. The current series of civic upsets — there will soon be more — may at least serve the useful purpose of convincing the liberal establishment that the mood of the country is not what its members keep telling each other it is. The real mood can be detected at any lunch counter, in any bar, or on any bus. Now that it has begun to be detected in the polling booth, liberal lamentations are of little further practical use.

Liberal establishments came into power with excessive confidence and excessive promises which were not fulfilled. Developments in the social situation worked against them, and demands for political change arose. The noisiest demands were from the left. But it should be obvious by now that every time someone under 21 screams into a television camera for leftward change, someone over 21 slips a piece of paper into a box to bring about rightward change.

The race course on Saturday was a brilliant scene when 5,000 people assembled for the second Saturday of the meeting and filled the stand, the boxes and promenade in front of the stand. Inside Us All, Violence Waiting to Get Out

By ANTHONY LEWIS
New York Times

ALDEBURGH, England—On the edge of the sea in East Anglia, the eastern bulge of England, visitors seek tranquility. This has been a fishing village, and enough of that reality remains to save it from the pudding face of tourism.

Victorian cottages line the stony beach. Fishermen cut up skate in a shabby hut near the magnificent Aldeburgh lifeboat, all blue and red.

Across the reeds and marshes in the back of the town are other tiny villages of the county of Suffolk, each with its sense of order and community, its roots in the past made apparent by a church or castle. There are sea birds all about, and swans in the river Alde.

★

But it was from this scene of apparent peace that Benjamin Britten drew inspiration for his operatic masterpiece of frustration and violence, "Peter Grimes."

The opera is based on a tale of George Crabbe, the Suffolk poet; but Britten lives and works in Aldeburgh, and no one who sees the opera can doubt that he was conveying a living atmosphere.

Grimes, in the opera, is a fisherman apart from his fellows, prouder, angrier. The villagers fear him as one they cannot understand, and they persecute him.

Grimes says he will show them: catch more fish, make more money, marry the schoolteacher.

★

But under the pressure of public hatred and his own frustration he is violent even to his love; he helps to cause his apprentice's death, and finally he drowns himself.

The brooding quality of the music cannot be conveyed in words. What it seems to say is that in anyone, even in the simplest village setting, there may lurk explosive qualities of anger, resentment and violence.

For it is not only the misfit hero but the villagers who are carried beyond reason in their reaction to an emotional situation. They run through the town crying for Grimes's blood.

The truth of Britten's premise was demonstrated to me recently in a very personal way. I received a letter from a couple in Washington describing how they had been attacked in the courtyard of their apartment house by four Negro youths, hit on the head with bricks, robbed.

My reaction was to say, out loud, that if I had been there and had been able to, I would have killed those attackers.

There it was suddenly, out in the open—the internal violence that lies waiting in us. The misery and frustration aroused by the knowledge of a vicious episode had produced feelings to match the cruelty of the attack.

If the juices of anger can work so fast, imagine what it must be for Negroes with a century or two of frustration working up their inner violence. It is one of the marvels of history that the explosion did not come sooner.

★

Understanding does not make an assault with bricks any more tolerable, but it is still necessary to try to understand. That is all we have.

Just as the violence of Negroes can be understood if not approved, and the ugly excesses of students, so can the fearful and violent reaction of the mass of middle-class, middle-age whites.

Attack brings repression every bit as emotional — but with the greater danger that it is supported by the apparatus of the state.

The picture of Negro students at Cornell carrying guns caused distress in Britain among those who know and care about the United States.

★

But the fact that helicopters under control of the Governor of California sprayed irritant gas on the population of Berkeley was much more horrifying.

The Times of London printed a long letter from an Assistant Professor of Zoology at Berkeley, Richard Dawkins, that identified what is so terrifying about the forces of repression in the United States. They have taken it on themselves to punish without trial.

Professor Dawkins mentioned several examples. A deputy sheriff in Berkeley shot a man as he ran away, then ignored him as he lay there. As helicopters sprayed gas over a plaza, soldiers blocked all but one exit.

Some 500 persons were arrested, held on high bail and made to lie prone in a gravel yard while waiting for the bail money to be raised. The purpose in each case could only have been punishment, not law enforcement.

That the desire for revenge exists in any of us is easy enough to see. We learn to control it by experience or wisdom or self-knowledge painfully gained.

What is not so easy to devise is social control —especially control of the violence of the majority. In the end the answer must be political leadership.

Unless politicians, especially conservative politicians, can offer an alternative persuasive to the frightened majority, we may have a society run by policemen.

★

We tend to think of these problems as new ones. It is doubtless true that the crammed populations of urban society produce terrible pressures.

But anxiety and frustration and violence have existed on earth for a very long time, even in primitive pastoral circumstances. We simply cannot escape the problem of the human personality.

New Deal Became Good Deal

By ANDREW KOPKIND
New Statesman

Ex-Justic e Fortas

Abe Fortas' epic progress from New Deal to Wheeler-Deal is not only a tale of one man's transfiguration but can serve as a parable for a generation's apotheosis.

The New Dealers have done extremely well by doing a little good.

Lyndon Johnson and Abe Fortas are the best-known turners of that trick, but Washington is full of lobbyists, business consultants, lawyers and high-priced hustlers of all hues who have made millions on a base of free-enterprise liberalism.

Fortas' particular route was both popular and profitable: he built a law practice from the friends and the friendliness he learned as a New Deal haut-fonctionnaire.

One example will illustrate the idea: as Under-Secretary of the Interior in Roosevelt's last cabinet, Fortas was in charge of overseeing the administration of Puerto Rico.

Caribbean Colony

He took his job seriously; in 1944, for instance, he said solemnly that management of the Caribbean colony's affairs was a job for a federal department, not a private law firm.

A year later, he "lifted" the Puerto Rican section out of Interior and became its representative—in private law practice.

Puerto Rico was good to Fortas over the years, and the compliment was returned. He drafted the island's constitutional instruments, lobbied for its interests in Washingon, and was a friend of its ruling elites.

The other half of it was that Fortas became heavily, and lucratively, involved in Puerto Rico's economy and politics—so much so that he often acted as a colonial administrator, from a distance.

Sometimes it wasn't so distant. He was sent by President Johnson to San Juan in 1965 to oversee the U.S intervention in the nearby Dominican Republic (where Fortas also had economic interests); Fortas's method was to get Puerto Rico's President Munoz Marin and other top dogs to smooth Johnson's way, as far as it was humanly possible (not very).

There were scores of other deals Fortas and his firm pulled off in Puerto Rico—some of them enormously important both to the island's comprador class and international corporate interests.

He successfully lobbied to keep "commonwealth" status (as opposed to independence or statehood) for Puerto Rico as a way to safeguard the colony's trade and tax advantages: Phillips Petroleum, for example, was able to get rights to build a refinery there in order to bring petrol (from Venezuelan crude) into the U.S., outside the quota restrictions that would apply if the fuel came in directly.

Fortas's role in formulating U.S. policy throughout the Caribbean thus became paramount.

Fortas formed his law firm with two other New Dealers, Thurmond Arnold and Paul Porter, both of whom brought their peculiar historical baggage and talents along.

Arnold had been a fierce trust-buster in FDR's justice department.

Just before the Second World War he had constructed the "Mother Hubbard" anti-trust case against the oil industry; if it had been pressed (it wasn't—the war intervened) it would have wrecked the oil oligopoly in the U.S.

MRS. FORTAS
. . . $220,000 a year

So Arnold became a principal adviser on anti-trust law in the firm, and it was in that area that Arnold, Fortas and Porter made much of its legal reputation.

Of course, the advice was given exclusively to the trusts —Lever Brothers, the Murchison (Texas) Empire, Federated Department Stores, Coca Cola, railroads, airlines, or whatever happened to be under the increasingly limp guns of the justice department.

'Pay Their Dues'

The partners learned in the New Deal, too, to distract attention from their corporate interests by befriending helpless victims of the system in whose profits they shared.

So from time to time—in the earlier days, at least—they would "pay their dues" (in Paul Porter's phrase) to the civil rights and civil liberties movements, and other worthy causes.

Fortas defended Owen Lattimore and other innocents in the McCarthy era, and later he was appointed by federal courts to handle the last phases of two press-worthy constitutional cases—Gideon and Durham—which established new rights for accused criminals in regard to police investigative procedures and insanity tests.

Because of the partners' reputations and Fortas's few famous cases, the best law-school graduates were attracted to the firm.

But in the 1960s they grew restless.

Arnold, Fortas and Porter was stingier about its lawyers' time than many of the more "conservative" firms.

When many young lawyers were going south on their firm's time and salary to help the civil rights movement, Arnold, Fortas and Porter would not oblige. Its lawyers had to go during vacation time, with no financial help.

The firm has yet to have a Negro associate (out of 50-odd lawyers), and until very recently, would not even hire a Negro secretary or clerk.

The firm was very interested in making a great deal of money, and that interest was crowned with success.

In 1966, for instance, the top partners' salary was $325,000 each; second-level salaries were worth $225,000; and the mere junior partners (those in their middle-thirties, more or less) got $115,000 that year. (Fortas' wife, Carolyn Agger, is a top tax lawyer in Arnold and Porter. In the year for which figures are quoted, she received about $220,000 in salary.)

Fees and retainers were enormous: Philip Morris paid the firm $1 million a year for two years to handle its fight against congressional and administrative restrictions on cigarette advertising.

The roles of Fortas and his partners in the tobacco-lobbying affair were the sleaziest jobs in the firm's history.

Their influence in Democratic Party politics was so strong that they were able to write reports for congressional committees right in the firm's offices — with the committee's staff members and A, F and P lawyers sitting around a table.

No Effect on Sales

Fortas himself is said to have written the "warning" legend now on every package of American cigarettes. That was the sum of the "restrictions" finally placed on the cigarette industry, and it was to have no effect on sales.

What Fortas also did was get the industry removed from several layers of administrative jurisdiction in exchange for accepting the "warning" label. As a result, the tobacco industry emerged in much better shape than it entered the fight.

All that means much more than that Arnold, Fortas and Porter gave effective counsel. It was a consequence of a system in which the big Washington law firms had become so powerful in national politics—and its personnel had formed such close ties to key figures—that a Fourth (or fifth, sixth, or seventh) political "Estate" was born.

Collectively, the Washington "Law Estate" wields power greater even than the total of its economic and political resources. For there are, in practice, no effective checks on its operation.

The relatively small, intellectually high powered and sequestered law firms are never open to view by press or public.

Well Insulated

Canons of "confidentiality" between lawyer and client are extrapolated from their original use in protection of individuals who have run afoul of the law, to cover extensive business dealings between law firms and corporate clients who in many ways make the law.

Isolated from mundane contacts and insulated from attacks, the firms can easily think themselves immune from the checks and balances which, in varying degrees, limit the power of other Estates.

As a former government official, who now teaches law, said recently of his friends in Fortas' firm: 'There are some people who begin to believe that the rules that apply to ordinary mortals don't apply to them."

It is not really surprising that cracks in the system would one day appear, and then widen. Fortas' spectacular fall from grace and his firm's probable decline are symptoms of the same rotting, withering disease which has affected all the liberal institutions that sprang from the New Deal.

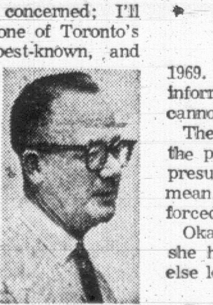
Political power has diminished at the top of the old system as it flows to the new insurgent forces in the middle and at the bottom—the McCarthy campaigners, the blacks, the students, the poor and, in a parallel way, the Vietnamese and the Cubans.

And so the struggle for a smaller amount of power between a larger number of top men becomes more intense. Fortas himself is a victim of that contest.

The law firms are losing their most valuable resources —the brightest minds from the best universities in the country. The best students are either avoiding law "careerism" or else entering the profession as a means to less privatistic ends.

Goodbye, Dull High Schools

By RICHARD NEEDHAM



Needham

I won't give the name of the high school concerned; I'll just say it's one of Toronto's oldest and best-known, and once had a distinguished academic record. Roughly a month ago, a boy who attends it asked if I would come and speak to the students; I said, "Sure," set a date and honored it. After the meeting, a woman teacher came up and spoke pleasantly to me. In the course of the conversation, either she asked me or I volunteered (I don't recall which) to come there and gossip with her English class, this being a subject about which I know a little and with which I've had a little success.

In any event she expressed enthusiasm, so I promised her that as soon as I got back to the office, I would drop a note setting a day and time. This promise, too, I honored.

●

In response to my note, I got the following letter signed by the same teacher who had expressed pleasure at my agreeing to talk with her class:

"Dear Mr. Needham: This will acknowledge receipt of an inquiry from your office concerning the prospect of your visiting this school on June 2, 1969. I regret that I must inform you that your request cannot be granted."

The letter was co-signed by the principal of the school; I presume he had drafted the mean, nasty little missive and forced her to sign it.

Okay, I know the way it is; she had to knuckle under or else lose her job.

●

But she could at least have phoned me or written me or dropped into the office to explain, perhaps apologize for, the turn of events. She didn't even have the courtesy, or perhaps I should say the courage, to do that.

This is by no means an isolated incident. I've been visiting high schools all across Canada for the past four years, and could tell dozens of stories along this line.

It's as Edgar Z. Friedenberg says, the high school is an ungracious institution; it has very bad manners, which stem essentially from its anxiety and suspicion — frightened administrators, frightened teachers, above all frightened students. The high school stinks of fear.

That's the chief reason why I won't be visiting high schools any more; I've been in about 250 of them now, and I know all I want or need to know about them. I know rather more than I want or need to know about them.

On most of these visits I was accompanied by Luscious Lindy or Notorious Nancy or both; they're relieved that there won't be any more of them.

Lindy says she can't cope any longer with the boredom — bored students, bored teachers, bored administrators, Nancy says the high schools depress her.

"Each time I walk into one, it is with a sinking of the heart. The regimented, lock-step day (ring bell, take up books, shuffle to next class) is really too much for any human being's spirit. Teachers on the whole I find a timid, awkward, unimaginative lot. As for the students, all I can do is feel heartily sorry for them as they are processed to take their dull, grey places in a dull, grey society."

●

Fear is death, boredom is death. When I go to a public school I expect to find — usually do find — vitality and enthusiasm among the students, curiosity, imagination, joy. I hardly ever find these things in the high schools. The students are sad, apathetic, unimaginative, cynical toward everything and everybody.

Certainly, they are cynical toward education as I would understand it — the cultivation of the mind, the appreciation of what is noblest in human life and human accomplishment.

They are in school because the law says they have to be in it — or because their parents say they have to be in it. They are in the school to pass examinations so they will get their Grade 12 or 13.

Then they will "get a good job;" or else they will go on to university; why? "To get a good job." The whole emphasis isn't on nourishing the mind, but on getting jobs and making money.

●

I suppose it's the parents rather than the teachers. In its interesting examination of the American high school (May 16, 1969) Life reports that while the majority of teachers think the primary duty of the high school is to produce students who ask questions, the majority of parents think its primary duty is to prepare them for jobs or for university, to control and discipline them. The high school is seen simply as an extension of the home.

But whether it's the parents or the teachers, the students or the administrators, I've had it.

Accustomed as I am to horrors and disasters, I just can't take it any more — the sterile buildings, the jangling bells and God-like public announcements, the bitterness and anger, the stupefying boredom, the omnipresent fear.

So goodbye, dear high schools, goodbye; I believe in life, I believe in love, I believe in learning, so from here on I will go where the life and the love and the learning are. They sure as hell aren't in the high school.

FORD BID BAD IN GM'S TOWN

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — There was consternation in Oshawa, home of Canada's biggest General Motors plant, when the lowest bid for 14 police cruisers came from Leslie MacDonald, a Ford dealer. His bid was $3,000 under the nearest local GM bid.

Oshawa Police Commission got around the situation by saying it did not know how a Ford would stand up to the rigors of police work. It rejected the bid except for two cars which will be checked for a year against GM cars.

"If at the end of this time the Fords stack up equal to the Chevrolets, the Ford dealers will be invited to tender again," said Oshawa Police Chief Jon Jenkins. "If they don't, then we'll stay with General Motors."

Mr. MacDonald said he felt he was treated unfairly.

"We were treading on sacred ground and the commission was afraid of retaliation from General Motors. That's why our bid was turned down."

Meanwhile a similar situation arose in Oakville, 54 miles west of here, which has the giant Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. plant as its biggest taxpayer.

There the lowest bidder on eight new cruisers and a station wagon for the police turned out to be the local Pontiac dealer. The cars were bought from him. "Sure we expected Ford to complain, but we have always accepted low tenders as long as they meet our specifications," said John Reese, Oakville purchasing agent.

He said that over the years the Oakville police had used all makes of cars and would continue to change according to the low bidders.

Negro's Denunciation Gets White Applause

VANCOUVER (CP) — A predominantly-white audience gave a standing ovation to a colored woman psychologist who denounced her white colleagues Saturday at the annual convention of the Western Psychological Association.

The ovation came after Sandy Garcia of the Southwest Regional Laboratory for Educational Research and Development near Los Angeles said some white psychologists misuse scientific techniques and distort data to buttress racist thinking.

She said there is a long history in the U.S. of pseudo-scientific inquiry aimed at removing Negroes from the family of man.

MAN AND APES

Miss Garcia said some authorities used Darwin's theory of evolution to show that the black man was a creature occupying a niche somewhere between man and the apes.

"Scientific methodology is misused and data is manipulated," she said. "These abuses are aimed at dehumanizing the blacks."

In another speech, Dr. Nathan Glazer of Harvard University, told psychologists cultural differences account much more than genetic factors for the varying rates of ethnic groups in the U.S. in educational attainment.

He cited Japanese-Americans in California as being one group displaying remarkable educational development.

He said although they were persecuted during the Second World War and sent to concentration camps, by 1950 Japanese-Americans had become the best-educated racial group in California.

House Adjournment Date Still in Doubt

By JOHN BEST

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons, working overtime, cleaned up four pieces of government legislation last week and made progress on others.

But the goal of a Friday, June 27, adjournment seemed just as uncertain at the end of the parliamentary week—perhaps more so—as at the beginning.

Evidence of the government's impatience to get its priority legislation through the House was the resurrection Friday of a variation of rule 16A, withdrawn under fierce opposition attack last December but never finally buried.

The proposed new rule—75C—would give the government power to limit debate without agreement from any other party, though three days would be required to terminate debate on each stage of a bill.

OTHERS SOFTER

Other, somewhat softer proposals were included in a rules package put forward by the House committee on rules and procedure and designed to speed up Commons business.

But it was 75C that the opposition parties, which have been nervous for six months that the Trudeau administration would bring back rule 16A in some form when it considered the time ripe, immediately seized upon.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre), a procedural expert, noted that only government members of the 12-member standing committee voted for the report tabled Friday.

Talking to reporters outside the House, he maintained that the Commons has been working efficiently since new rules went into effect in January.

Gerald W. Baldwin (PC—Peace River), his party's House leader, said the government will have to be prepared to keep the Commons in session after next week's hoped-for adjournment if it insists on adoption of the full report.

DELAY POSSIBLE

Government House Leader Donald C. Macdonald said the government will do just that if important legislation dealing with regional economic disparities, transportation in the Maritimes, and the official languages bill is not passed by June 27.

In the week just passed, the House by all-party agreement worked 10 extra hours to clean up pending legislation.

During these extra hours it pushed through a bill to make off-track messenger betting services illegal, a bill to amend the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act and two measures to amend the National Housing Act.

In addition, it advanced the Atlantic provinces transportation assistance act along the trail to final legislative enactment.

During the week the House also took up clause-by-study of the languages bill.

This legislative activity was woven around four so-called allotted days—sometimes called grievance days—when the House debates subjects chosen by the opposition. Topics covered were inflation, wheat, Indians and veterans affairs.

Another two allotted days are scheduled to come up this week. Tuesday, the House takes a day off in honor of St. Jean Baptiste, Quebec's patron saint.

At this stage, considering the work that remains to be done, most MPs must be wondering whether they'll be here in the July dog days.

Pope Promises Policy Reforms To Bolster Laity's Confidence

VATICAN CITY (Reuters) — Pope Paul today promised new reforms to deal with the crisis of dissent in the Roman Catholic Church and what he termed the "lack of confidence" in the church leadership.

Speaking to cardinals who greeted him on the eve of his feast day, he said he was calmly studying all proposals for church reforms, including the priesthood.

He said he was especially attentive to suggestions for making the priesthood more adapted to modern society but did not mention the controversial issue of celibacy.

The Pope said one major cause of the church crisis was the spread of erroneous interpretations of traditional dogma.

Another was "a certain diffused lack of confidence in the exercise of our hierarchic ministry which, by the mandate of Christ, unites and guides the people of God."

He said proofs of his open-mindedness to reforms were his convocation of his consultative synod of bishops in October and a special document on papal envoys and bishops published today.

The document is being issued at the request of bishops, some of whom have complained that Vatican envoys sometimes fringe on their jurisdiction.

POLICY CRITICIZED

The announcement was made following criticisms of the church administrative machinery made by progressive leaders such as Joseph Cardinal Suenens, Catholic primate of Belgium.

The Vatican said the document, to be published later today in the Vatican newspaper Osservatore Romano, would be called Motu Proprio. It was being issued to put the function of pontifical representatives "in the proper light."

It said the envoys had the duty "to serve the bishops, priests, religions and laity, to be a bond and channel between the Holy See and the local churches, never taking the place of the bishops but working to their advantage and the good of all.

During the 1962-65 Vatican Council some foreign bishops complained that the Vatican listened less to them than to its envoys—usually Italians.

POPE PAUL
. . . open-minded

The Pope said "it is not easy today to have a post of responsibility in the church."

He said he could not remain insensitive to criticisms although not all these were exact or justified.

"We shall only say that we shall meditate calmly on the requests sent to this apostolic see with a double sentiment—that of humble and sincere objectivity, ready to consider the plausible reasons for these contrasting attitudes."

The Pope also renewed his appeal for peace in Vietnam, Nigeria and the Middle East.

Rocky's Latin Tour Hits 'Turning Point'

NEW YORK (Reuters) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller returned home Sunday night after a six-day visit to Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay that he described as the "turning point" of his four-part Latin American tour for President Nixon.

The trip, the third in the series, went off quietly in comparison with the troubles of his previous journeys, although three days of anti-American demonstrations in Montevideo forced him to bypass that Uruguayan capital in favor of the beach resort of Punta Del Este.

ASKED TO STAY AWAY

During the first two trips, Rockefeller touched all the other Latin American countries on his schedule except Venezuela and Chile, which asked him to stay away because of fears of violent demonstrations, and Peru, where the government refused to receive him because of a dispute with Washington over fishing and oil rights.

Rockefeller's mission in Latin America was to discuss development aid and other measures to tighten inter-American unity.

The leaders generally requested more U.S. financial aid for development projects, credits with no strings attached and a larger share of U.S. markets for their products.

VIOLENCE ENSUED

Rockefeller also discussed defence and political problems with the government leaders, including anti-American feelings that exploded in bloody violence in most of the countries he visited.

ARE YOU BALD? Or LOSING HAIR?

(Men) (Women)
Get The Facts

BEWARE of these Symptoms of Baldness
Once you notice symptoms of excessive dryness or oiliness, itchy scalp, excessive hair in the combing, tender areas, see ROCHESTER before follicle shrinkage ruins all hopes for a healthy head of hair.

"We always make a personal examination before suggesting any treatment," he pointed out. "There is no one cure-all that will correct every one of the 18 scalp disorders that can cause baldness."

Who Can Be Helped?

Will this new treatment cure baldness? "No," said Rochester sincerely. "We cannot help men who are slick-bald after years of gradual hair loss. But where your scalp still grows hair, we can at least save and improve what you have. Usually, we can grow more hair even where you have only 'fuzz' now."

The important thing is: Don't wait until it's too late!

Helps Women as Well

Rochester offers hope for women, too . . . even those suffering from troublesome alopecia areata. The Rochester formula has helped many despairing women to save their hair, gain new hair beauty, new self-confidence. It can do the same for you.

Free Scalp Examination

See Mr. Chesters in person. Learn how baldness can be corrected, and new hair grown. The new Rochester method permits you to actually correct your baldness and improve your hair in the privacy of your own home.

For a free examination and discussion of your hair problems ask the desk clerk at the Hotel Sussex in Victoria Tuesday, June 24, only, between 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. for Mr. Chesters' suite number.

You don't need an appointment. Examinations are given in private.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Oats and barley trading was active with dull trading in oilseeds at the close today on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

Domestic shippers bought oats and barley which developed some price strength with short covering.

Exporters showed no interest in flax and rapeseed where prices were easier.

Rye trade was light to exporters and commission houses. Offerings were thin.

Total trading volumes Friday: Flax 489,000 bushels, rapeseed 216,000, rye 343,000.

Export loadings of Canadian wheat Saturday: Japan 1,309,000 bushels, Germany 75,000, Britain 1,058,000.

Lakehead prices for Class Two, IGA and Domestic wheat all were unchanged.

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat futures advanced more than 2 cents a bushel on the Board of Trade today on a variety of influences.

Corn futures advanced nearly 2 cents a bushel but came under profit-taking late in the session that nearly halved the price rise.

Trade was active through most of the session and public interest, generated by reports of weather problems in small grains, was high.

The advance of wheat futures got under way on the opening.

The Russian wheat crop may be sharply lower this year, some trade sources noted, because of weather difficulties.

Argentina also had troubles with her wheat crop and may have to turn to the U.S. for purchase or barter.

These factors influenced buying but profit-taking later trimmed advances.

Near the close new buying sent prices to highs for the day. Rye futures also advanced, largely on the strength in wheat.

At the close, wheat was up to 2 higher, July 1.29¾; corn mixed, July 1.28¼; oats higher, July 62⅝; rye higher, July 1.17¾; soybeans mixed, July 2.66¼.

Record Declines for Day

The Toronto stock market was on its way to its worst daily loss on record just before the close today. Volume was the most active it has been in recent weeks.

The industrial index led the plunge, falling 5.41 to 172.94 by midafternoon. It was down 5.47 earlier in the day.

The biggest previous daily drop on the industrial index was 4.02 on June 11.

AT TORONTO the market plunged in late trading.

North Canadian Oils was up 1¾ to 13½.

AT NEW YORK the market was jolted to another loss today as continued concern over tight money again weighed it down.

Trading was fairly active near the close.

The Dow Jones industrial average at 1:30 p.m. was off 7.95 at 868.21. The Dow had been off 9.05 at 1 p.m. Brokers said there apparently was some bargain hunting among the blue chip issues.

Losses led gains by about 9,000 issues.

Prices near the close included Pennzoil United off ⅞ at 34⅝; Occidental Petroleum, off 1¾ at 35; United Aircraft, off 2⅛ at 63; Avco preferred, off 5½ at 52, and Natomas, off 4⅝.

Prices generally were lower on the American Stock Exchange.

AT LONDON the stock market rallied strongly today with equities higher over a wide front.

British funds also were firm, with gains of up to ½. Leading industrials recorded numerous gains.

Hudson's Bay rose 2s 6d to 152s 6d. Bowaters added 1s 1½d.

The continuing slide in trans-Atlantic markets and a still lower dollar premium brought widespread losses to dollar stocks. Canadian Pacific led the decline in Canadians with an 11-point fall to 189. Pacific Pete dropped 5½ points to 84½ while Hollinger, Inco and Trans-Canada Pipe lost up to 4¾ points. Banks lost several shillings.

AT MONTREAL the market dipped sharply to its lowest level this year during light afternoon trading today. Banks dove farthest.

The slide followed heavy losses on the New York market. The composite index dropped 4.40 to 173.06.

In banks, Nova Scotia last 1½ to 20, Commerce 1⅛ to 18½, Royal ½ to 19½, Montreal ½ to 13¾ and Toronto-Dominion ½ to 19¼.

Among speculative mines and oils, Crusade toppled 90 cents to 3.00, Chemalloy 50 cents to 3.50 and Castle Oil 40 cents to 3.00.

Volume for both markets at 1 p.m. was 740,361 shares compared with 449,656 at the same time Friday.

AT VANCOUVER prices hit the skids again today in sympathey with a decline across the continent.

They were down, with only a relatively small number of mining and industrial issues managing to keep their heads above water. All the oils traded were down.

Volume up to 11 o'clock was 2,000,000 shares.

In the industrials, Driver, EDP, House of Stein, Fields and Whonnock Lumber all took substantial losses.

In the mines, Buttle, Brenda, Churchill, Copperidge, Gibraltar, Largo, Magnum, Northwest Ventures, Radex, Silver Arrow, Stannex and Utica were all off. Casino reversed the trend, putting on 11 cents at 90 cents on trades of 105,900 .

Government Bond Prices Improve

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Government of Canada issues posted moderate price improvements in fairly active trading on the Canadian bond market this week. Provincials and corporates closed lower.

In the short-term Canada market, the 7¼ per-cent April 1, 1972, issue was up 35 cents to 98.70 bid and 99 asked and the 6¼-per-cent April 1, 1971, issue 30 cents to 97.50 bid and 97.80 asked.

In the long end of the market, the bellwether 4½-per-cent Sept 1, 1983, issue gained ¼ at 7¼ bid and 72¾ asked.

Investment dealers said the improvement of the Canada market is attributable mainly to the success of the federal government's latest refinancing issue which started trading this week.

SOLD OUT QUICKLY

The issue sold out quickly and helped improve the tone in the secondary market. The new short-term ⅞6-per-cent July 1, 1970, issue, which was offered at 100, is trading at 100.20 bid and 100.30 asked.

Dealers said another factor helping Canadian bond prices along this week was the improved tone in the U.S. bond market. The Federal Reserve bank has provided funds to accommodate the seasonal loan pressure over June 15 and this tended to ease pressure in the U.S. money markets.

Provincials closed the week about ½ lower.

The average yield on three-month treasury bills increased to a record 7.11 per cent this week.

The six-month bill yield was 7.24 per cent, compared with 7.25 per cent last week.

Day-to-day money to finance dealer inventories was available at seven per cent.

Bulk Handlers Installed At Superport

VANCOUVER (CP) — Installation of bulk coal-handling equipment has begun at Roberts Bank, the first outerport in North America designed to handle the giant dry-bulk carriers now coming into frequent use in international shipping.

The National Harbors Board said today the first phase of the development, to be ready to receive ships later this year, has been virtually completed.

The 50-acre site has been created mainly from material dredged from the area. It is connected to the mainland by a three-mile causeway, along which railways will carry cargoes for shipping from the port.

BRITONS SHUN CANADA

TORONTO (CP) — Canada is only fourth on the list of countries to which young Britons want to emigrate, the owner of a company that finds jobs for them said Saturday.

Michael Saunders of Michael Saunders Management Ltd., London, said Canada trails the United States, Australia and South Africa.

But Saunders said Canada can offer more to men under 25 than Britain can hope to do.

"If you achieve success in Canada, you will achieve success in real terms because in Britain there is no way of achieving a big salary, whereas in Canada you can achieve a high salary and take it home," he said. "The greatest career potential of any country is in Canada."

Tendency Remains to Proceed From One Crisis to Another

By HOBART ROWEN

COPENHAGEN (WP) — Some of the best financial minds in Europe, the United States and Japan met here all last week.

But a reporter who has listened to them carefully, on and off the record, must conclude that they do not have any answers to the word's pressing financial problems.

For example, it is apparent to everybody that something is wrong with the existing rigid international exchange rate system. The International Monetary Fund and the Dutch government have studied new alternatives, like wider bands and "automatic" crawling pegs that might bring some flexibility into the system.

But the bankers and treasury officials in Europe exhibit an appalling degree of complacency on this issue.

Let the existing system work, they say. Get rid of inflation in the United States. A crawling peg, says a leading international figure "would produce a can of worms."

There is a strong tendency, as Raymond Aron conceded in a reflective moment, "to go from one crisis to another" and keep the existing system. But Aron did not propose any changes.

Or take the question of U.S. inflation. There is a universal, even a passionate feeling here that the U.S. must end its price, wage, and interest rate spiral—else there will be a complete realignment of currency relationships, in effect a dollar devaluation in terms of other currencies.

The Europeans are too polite to say so directly, but what they would like to see is a recession in the U.S.—to be sure, not one big enough to trigger a world-wide slump, but big enough to cool the economy.

American officials resist excessively harsh measures, but there are some U.S. bankers and businessmen who would get tougher, even though they recognize the social problems a severely deflationary scheme would entail.

One important New York banker told me: "Businessmen haven't yet got the message. What they need is a signal—say a 100 point, drop on the Dow Jones index, or some brokerage house going bust to convince themselves that inflation must end."

His thesis, in effect, is that the basic economy itself is showing signs of cooling down, but that the financial markets are too exuberant.

Another banker confesses that despite self-serving statements about how carefully banks are rationing loans, to customers, "there are plenty still beating the bush, even advertising for people to come in and borrow."

But when it comes to accepting some discipline, the big American bankers say "no, no—don't interfere with the market mechanism."

Walter B. Wriston, president of the First National City Bank of New York suggests that a voluntary federal reserve guideline to limit bank lending might have been useful earlier, but "it's too late now."

But Wriston and other influential bankers didn't break any doors down months ago to solicit government intervention.

Clearly, some sort of government action was needed. Individual banks, if they showed restraint, would simply lose business to less patriotic competitors. But, the federal reserve doesn't like to interfere with sacrosanct market mechanisms, either.

Looking at the whole picture, one comes away with a most insecure feeling. Inflation persists in the United States, and Euro-dollar rates are still fantastically high, 10½ percent for one-year money.

If there is a dynamic international financial leadership anywhere, it hasn't surfaced here. The tendency is to rock along with the old system, the old devices. The best cure for inflation, some of the oldtimers feel, is a dose of recession.

Yet, the social and racial problems stare everyone in the face. France, if it relys on M. Pinay for its financial guidance, may head directly back into a new student revolt. The U.S., if it were to listen to European advice, would provoke a black uprising overnight.

Opening this conference, Bank of America president Rudolph A. Petersen warned that the world faced an "incipient crisis" if the world's politicians and money managers fail to recognize "the peril of the status quo."

Nothing that happened here suggests that anyone was listening to Petersen. The policy, if one can so dignify it, is to let things drift.

Pan Am Unites With Branches

CALGARY (CP) — Standard Oil Co. (Indiana) today announced the formation of a new Canadian company, Amoco Canada Petroleum Co. Ltd., in which it will consolidate operations currently carried on in Canada by Pan American Petroleum Corp. and other wholly-owned subsidiaries.

The new Canadian company, which will have its headquarters in Calgary, will include the oil and gas operations of the Calgary division of Pan American, Winter Oil Co. and Muskeg Oil Co., together with the chemicals operations of the Patchogue Plymouth division of Pan American. The companies have more than 1,000 employees in Canada.

Standard Oil chairman John E. Swearingen said formation of the new company is in keeping with the continuing rapid growth of Indiana Standard's extensive operations in Canada.

He said Indiana Standard also expects to apply soon for listing of its shares on the Toronto Stock Exchange, which will be the company's first stock exchange listing outside the U.S.

President of Amoco Canada will be John C. Meeker, who has been serving as vice-president and division manager for the Calgary division of Pan American Petroleum Corp.

Indiana Standard has conducted petroleum operations in Canada through Pan American Petroleum since 1948, and began producing crude oil and natural gas in Western Canada in 1953.

In addition, to oil and gas exploration and producing operations in Western Canada, the company's exploratory activities include interests in the Arctic region, on the mainland near the mouth of the Mackenzie River, on the Grand Banks off Newfoundland, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, in Canadian waters in Lake Erie and off the west coast of British Columbia.

The company's Patchogue Plymouth division is building a new plant for manufacture of woven polyolefin fabrics at Hawkesbury, Ont. One of the plant's major products will be synthetic carpet backing for use in the manufacture of indoor-outdoor carpeting.

IBM to Charge For Services

ARMONK, N.Y. (AP) — The giant International Business Machines company, faced with anti-trust suits by the United States government and private industry, announced today it will start charging for certain systems and engineering activities, computer programming, and customer education courses.

IBM, with more than 70 per cent of the multi-million-dollar computer business, said the new charges will be effective immediately for new orders and will begin Jan. 1 for customers with machines installed or on order.

In an anti-trust suit filed earlier this year, the U.S. justice department charged that IBM has discriminated among customers and had limited development of computer programming and support industries through a policy of quoting a single price for a computer system, programming know-how and related support.

IBM said it also was involved in anti-trust suits brought by Control Diata Corp., Data Processing Financial and General, a leasing firm, Applied Data Research and Programmatics.

U.K. Trade Measurement Holds Cheer

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain has been cheating itself out of £10 million ($26 million) a month for the last six years, it was officially disclosed Saturday.

An underestimate on the value of exports of between two and three per cent was discovered stretching back to 1964, Chancellor of the Exchequer Roy Jenkins said.

This meant that for the first five months of 1969, deficit-ridden Britain was almost certainly in the black, Jenkins told supporters of the governing labor party at a meeting in eastern England.

"And for the calendar year 1968, our much-publicized overall balance of payments deficit of £458 million was a very substantial overestimate," Jenkins said.

"There has been no counter-balancing (underestimating) of imports," he added.

A government spokesman said the discrepancy came to light as a result of a systematic investigation of export trade last year and the accuracy of its measurement.

Fish Killed

SURREY (CP) — The British Columbia Wildlife Federation is attempting to determine what killed large numbers of fish found dead Saturday in the Nicomekl River in this Vancouver suburb. Samples of water and some of the fish were taken for laboratory analysis.

Japan Tops World For Production

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Japan far outpaced the rest of the world in growth of industrial production in the 1958-67 period with a rise of 245 per cent, the United Nations reported Sunday. Canada was fourth.

Russia ranked second with 121 per cent, followed by Italy with 113 per cent, Canada with 77 per cent, the United States with 69 per cent, West Germany with 56 per cent, France with 51 per cent and Britain with 32 per cent.

World industrial production in the period expanded by 86 per cent, the UN's statistical year book showed.

In a compilation of facts and figures about the decade 1958-67 the year book also reported that Canada led the world in the number of tourist visitors in 1967 when Expo 67 was held in Montreal. Canada registered 40 million visitors, Spain 16 million, Italy 12.6 million and France, 12 million.

It reported that world population in mid-1967, the latest date for which statistics have been collated, was 3.4 billion or 516 million above the mid-1958 figure.

EUROPE MOST DENSE

Asia—excluding Russia—had 1.9 billion of whom 720 million were estimated to live in China and 511 million in India. Europe had 452 million and was the most densely-populated continent.

Latin America's population of 259 million exceeded that of North America by 39 million and also showed the biggest annual increase—2.9 per cent.

Africa had 328 million people and showed an increase of 2.4 per cent.

Best in Battle But Lose Ninth

COQUITLAM—Victoria Shamrocks appeared to have the edge in the fighting department here Saturday night, but for the ninth straight time the Rocks failed to win a Western Lacrosse Association game.

Coquitlam Adanacs laced visiting Irish 17-5 before the game was called at 17:10 of the final period when both benches emptied for a battle royal.

Referees Norm Parker and Jim Gray assessed 90 minutes in penalties to Adanacs while Shamrocks were tagged with "only" 52.

Approximately 830 fans watched the melee, which erupted when tiny Bob Rezansoff of Coquitlam was floored in a corner during a scramble for a loose ball.

Mike Gates charged Victoria's Vern Black from behind, players from both benches invaded the floor.

Vern, who had kayoed Whitey McKean with one punch in an earlier scrap, left Gates with a possible broken nose.

Ten minutes later the players, tired from the tough game, decided to call it quits.

GAME MISCONDUCTS

Vern and brother Tom Black were each handed five-minute fighting penalties as well as game misconducts. Clubmates Pat Green and Tom Churchill were given five minutes apiece.

Gates drew the most longest assessment, five minutes for fighting, five for charging and a game misconduct.

Coquitlam's Harry Woolley and Bill Bradley received fighting calls and game misconducts while Rezanzoff and Adanac goalie Terry Garrett were handed five minutes each for fighting.

JUNIOR SCORES FIVE

Victoria coach Tom Druce said that until the time things blew up, the referees kept tight control over the game.

Before the battle, highlights were provided by junior-star Les Shoemaker, who pumped in five Adanac goals and set up two others.

Al MacLean led Victoria snipers with two tallies while single goals were provided by Chuck Hardy, Charn Dhillon and Ken Alexander.

Beer Takes First West Unicorn Title

The best winds for many days helped sailors competing in three local championships off Cattle Point this weekend.

Brisk breezes were particularly valuable to the Unicorn Catamaran skippers, who raced in the first multi-hull championships ever held in B.C.

Winner of the Western Canadian Unicorn Trophy, and also the Victoria Unicorn Challenge Cup was RCNSA's Doug Beer, with four firsts and one third in the five-race series.

Doug was instrumental in organizing the building program last year which produce 15 of the Mazetti-designed single-handed intermediate "A" class cats now sailing locally.

The lively "cats," 18 feet long and weighing 150 pounds, covered the six-mile course in 25 minutes on Saturday, when the winds were blowing 18-20.

Placing second in the series was RVic's Roger Napier, who is the Victoria Fleet Captain. Vince Martorine was third, while John Ganton and ex-Edmontonian Trevor Corvle tied for fourth. Others competing were Pat Musters, Jim Musgrave, Chuck Hanan, Roy Darling and Rick Telford.

Unicorn catamarans have fleets in England, France, U.S.A., Calgary, Edmonton, and Toronto, with boats also sailing in Duncan and Vancouver.

The Thunderbird and Haida championships, also hosted by Royal Victoria Yacht Club and using the same courses, had three races Saturday and two Sunday.

THREE FIRSTS

Thirteen Thunderbirds competed, with the winning Lemolo, skippered by Red McBride, taking three first on Saturday. Leigh Holland's Invicta placed second, followed by Ian Stewart's Ahooya.

Tne Haidas were led by Denny Coverdale's Melee, with two firsts, followed by Gordon MacKay's Whistler and Brian Saunder's Impulse.

Service dinghies racing Sunday at RCNSA were topped by the yellow boat skippered by Tony Sayle, with wife Margaret as crew. They placed first and second in two races.

John Faulkner's white boat, and Peter Robbins' Aquabat each had one second and one third.

Villa Squad Rolls To Baseball Title

Trims Okanagan in Final To Earn Canada Games Trip

By STEWART LANG

Eager and efficient young players with Vancouver's Villa Motor Inn took the final step at Royal Athletic Park Sunday that launched them on a journey to the shores of the Atlantic Ocean.

Villa tagged Okanagan All-Stars with a 9-1 defeat in the final game of the B.C. senior amateur baseball "Canada Games" tournament to earn the provincial berth in the Canadian Summer Games at Halifax and Dartmouth in August.

The Vancouver squad went through the three-day, double-loss-elimination tournament without a defeat, blanking Victoria All-Stars 7-0 Friday evening and downing Kootenay All-Stars 12-5 Saturday to earn a bye into the final.

Victoria never seemed to jell during the tourney, losing the opening game with five errors and committing three more as they were eliminated 6-4 by Okanagan in Saturday's second game.

Errors enabled Okanagan batters to pick up their first four runs off loser Pete Duncan.

Russ Keckalo, with a triple, Jerry Robertson, with a double, and Rick Sugden's single each provided a run.

Victoria snapped its scoreless streak in the fifth inning as Duncan paced a four-run rally off victor Reg Main with a one-out triple off the scoreboard in left field.

Gord Strongman then cracked a single to score Duncan.

Art Worth followed with a line drive to shortstop Sugden, who dropped the ball leaving both runners safe. Les Brice singled in Strongman and Worth rambled home on a wild pitch.

Keckalo evened the count in the sixth inning by coming across the plate on a passed ball. Successive singles by Bob Adshead, Don Archer, Keckalo and Robertson produced the winning runs in the seventh inning with two out.

Sallaway Bolstered Okanagan Club

Tom Sallaway of the city league was picked up by the Trail-based Kootenay team on Saturday morning to strengthen their pitching staff.

He started out for the Kootenay squad Sunday morning against Okanagan, going three innings before being replaced by Barry Seal.

Solid batting aided the Okanagan Stars, who got 13 hits on the way to a 10-8 triumph over the Kootenay crew.

It was after this that the Okanagan club faced Villa and eventual defeat on a diamond made slippery by rain.

Villa remained error-free while overpowering two Okanagan pitchers with 15 hits.

Marty Lewis came up with some fine pitching, striking out seven Okanagan batters and snuffing out a rally in the fourth inning, when runners were on second and third. He fanned the next batter to retire the side.

Stu Winrob led winners at the plate with a home run over the right-field fence in the bottom of the sixth, a double and a single during five turns at bat. The home run was the only one of the tourney.

But honors for power at the plate must go to a member of the losing team. Okanagan's centre-fielder, Archer, was high for the tournament with 12 hits for 16 times at bat for a .750 average.

Toronto Driver Wheels to Victory

EDMONTON (CP) — Eppie Weitzes of Toronto, driving a Lola T142 Formula A with almost monotonous regularity at Speedway Park Sunday, won the third race in the Canadian road racing championship series.

Turning laps in the neighborhood of 1:36, Weitzes finished all 40 laps of the 2.57-mile circuit to take first place, $375 in prize money and nine points for the nine-race series standings.

The fastest lap for his Chevrolet-powered open-wheeler was 1:32.2 for an average speed of 98.668 miles an hour.

Horst Kroll, national sports car champion from Scarborough, Ont., was second in a Ford-powered Lotus for six points and Bill Brack of Toronto in a Lotus GTX was third for four points.

LAPS ALL BUT ONE

By the end of the race, Weitzes had lapped all the other 11 drivers except Kroll, over whom he had a 59-second lead.

Weitzes' win gave him a total of 13 points in the standings for a share of third place with Brack.

Series leader George Eaton of Toronto was unable to compete Sunday because of a conflicting race in California. He has 15 points.

Kroll is second with 14 points and Hill is fourth with five points.

The nine-race series offers $1,500 purse money for each race with $29,000 going into a points fund to be shared at the end of the season.

Optimists Surprise

Nick Hoy's second-inning homer led Evening Optimist Babe Ruth All Stars to a 6-2 exhibition upset over Victoria Optimists of the Connie Mack League at Reynolds Park Sunday. Hoy let a five-run surge in the second as pitcher Ron Holmes chalked up a three-hitter.

Invitations Assured For Mainland Three

Three Vancouver-area golfers have virtually wrapped up invitations to play for B.C.'s interprovincial women's golf team but the fourth spot is wide open.

Marilyn Palmer, Gail Harvey Moore and Janet MacWha, all former members of B.C.'s team, completed their 72-hole trials in Victoria at the weekend with commanding leads.

Vancouver's Susan McCleery is fourth with a slim, one-stroke advantage over Gertie Beaton and Flo McFaul.

The 36-hole qualifying test in the provincial women's tournament at Marine Drive, July 21-22, will determine the final makeup of the team.

Mrs. Moore, married to a former Victorian, came up with the finest round of the 72-hole trials Sunday at Colwood by posting a one-under-par 76, three strokes better than Miss Palmer.

Miss MacWha led the field Saturday at Glen Meadows with a four-over-par 80 to establish a new women's record for the long and tough North Saanich course.

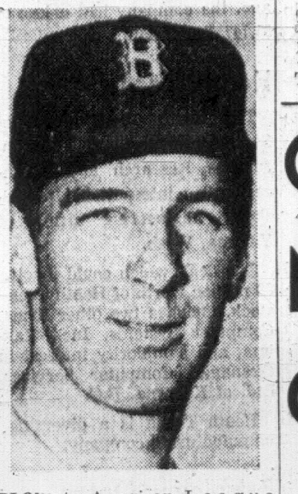
MINOR LEAGUERS DRAW CITY BASEBALL AWARDS

Eight players representing eight leagues operating under the wing of the Victoria and District Baseball Association slammed out "hits" in the sportsmaship department.

The eight were named recipients of the VDBA sportsmanship awards, presented Saturday during the B.C. senior tournament at Royal Athletic Park.

Receiving awards were Terry Standlund, Connie Mack, Gord McKee, Victoria Babe Ruth; Norm Baker, Evening Optimist Babe Ruth; Eric Lister, Victoria Colt; Mike Lee, Cosmopolitan Babe Ruth; Terry Painter, Layritz Pony; Laurie Johnston, Triangle Pony, and Wayne Simpson, Carnarvon Pony League.



BLOW to American League baseball hopes of Boston Red Sox was delivered Sunday when pitcher Jom Lonborg (above) suffered fracture of little toe of left foot when hit by his own foul ball. He will be sidelined about three weeks.

Spartans Whip Calgary

By The Canadian Press

Two Vancouver imports sparked Edmonton Canadians to a 5-1 win over Saskatoon City in one of three Western Canada Soccer League games during the weekend.

Elsewhere, Regina Concordia extended its first-place lead to six points in the eastern division with a 3-0 win Saturday over Winnipeg Blues and Vancouver Spartans took a 4-1 decision from Calgary Kickers before 3,234 fans in Vancouver Sunday.

Imports Ken Legge and Heini Kufeld each scored two goals to lead the Canadians, who took over sole possession of first place in the western division with nine points, one more than Vancouver, and two ahead of Calgary.

It was the eighth successive defeat for Saskatoon, which has yet to win a game.

In Vancouver, the Spartans came from behind a 1-0 half-time deficit to hand Calgary its third defeat in seven starts. The Kickers have three wins and a tie.

Harold Hansen, Glen Johnson, Bruce Twamley of Victoria and Johnny Milner scored for Vancouver. Dan Martin got the only Calgary goal—a 28-yard floater that deceived Spartans' goalie Mike Gilmore.

Once-Hapless Mets Challenge Cubs for Lead

By The Canadian Press

New York Mets, a 1962 baseball expansion team and once doormats of the National League, Sunday bowled over the defending league champions twice and edged closer to the lead in the Eastern Division.

Gary Gentry and Jerry Koosman combined for strong pitching efforts as the Mets posted 5-1 and 1-0 wins over St. Louis Cardinals.

The twin victory, before the league's largest crowd of the season, 55,862, at New York's Shea Stadium, advanced the Mets within 4½ games of Chicago Cubs. New York now has won 18 of its last 23 starts, including three of four against the Cardinals.

EXPOS SPLIT

In other NL action Sunday, the Cubs used a four-run rally in the ninth inning to trip Montreal Expos 7-6. But the Expos, Canada's first major league baseball team, bounced back to win the second 5-4.

Los Angeles Dodgers shut out Cincinnati Reds 5-0 and their second game was called because of rain. Atlanta Braves split two games with San Francisco. The Braves, who trail Los Angeles, the Western Division leaders, by a half-game, won the second game 7-5 after losing the opener to the Giants 5-1. Pittsburgh Pirates blanked Philadelphia Phillies 6-0, but lost the second game 3-2, and Houston Astros downed San Diego Padres 2-0.

In the American League, Detroit Tigers paraded nine pitchers to the mound but Washington Senators paraded 18 runners around the bases and wound up with a 9-4, 9-5 sweep of a doubleheader.

In the eighth inning of the opener, six Washington runs wiped out a 4-3 Detroit lead. In the fourth inning of the nightcap the Senators, trailing 1-0, sent 14 men to the plate and scored all nine runs.

TIGERS TRAILING

The defending World Series champion Tigers are in third place in the American League's Eastern Division, 12 games behind Baltimore Orioles.

Elsewhere in the AL, Oakland and Minnesota split a doubleheader, leaving the Athletics two percentage points ahead of the Twins in the Western Division. The Athletics won the opener 7-3 and Minnesota took the nightcap 4-3 in 13 innings.

Baltimore drubbed Cleveland Indians 6-0 after losing the first game 3-2, New York Yankees beat Boston Red Sox 5-3 in 10 innings, Chicago White Sox edged California Angels 1-0 and Seattle Pilots beat Kansas City Royals 5-1.

At New York, Gentry gave up one St. Louis run in the first inning of the opener, but settled down to hold the Cardinals scoreless until the ninth inning. Cal Koonce relieved to collect the final two outs with two Cardinals on base.

Tommy Agee drove across two New York runs as the Mets raked Steve Carleton and two St. Louis relief pitchers for 13 singles, three each by Bud Harrelson, Cleon Jones and Jerry Grote.

Koosman scattered seven hits and collected nine strikeouts in the second game for his third shutout of the season.

"We have the feeling now that nobody can beat us when we take the field," Koosman, a 17-game winner as a rookie last year, said. "Nobody can stand in our way."

City Crew Narrow Loser In Sailoff

By SHIRLEY HEWETT

Royal Victoria Yacht Club's Norman Marcus with crew Bob Grundisen and Geoff Arndt has narrowly missed representing Area H in the Mallory Cup finals.

The trio, who had a one point lead going into the last race, lost out by ¼ point to Seattle's Don Stewart of the host Corinthian Yacht Club, who finished first in the crucial race to Marcus' second.

* * *

The six race series was sailed in Solings, the new Olympic Class 3-men boat. Marcus and crew had four—2nds, one 1st, and one 4th in the two-day event, which was sailed in steady winds up to 15 mph.

Five Area H centres were represented in the sailoffs: Seattle (two teams), Portland, Hawaii, Vancouver, (West Van Y.C.), and Vancouver Island (RVic Y.C.) Area H includes B.C, Washington and Oregon States, and Hawaii.

Stewart will travel to the North American finals in August, to be sailed in 5.5 metres in the Eastern States.

It took him two months, but Bill Price finally found "high gear" again at Western Speedway.

Price won his first race since April 26 by speeding to victory in the fast heat of a stock car program Saturday at Western Speedway.

A total of 51 cars competed.

Frank Lafford edged Ron Crawford to win the 20-lap "B" main event while Larry LePard won the special mechanic's race.

BY FOUR STROKES . . . . . . IN KEMPER OPEN

Douglass Coasts Home

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Dale Douglass scored a final round 67 Sunday for a four-stroke victory in the Kemper open golf tournament.

He had a 274 total, 14 under par for the 7,205-yard, par-72 course, and claimed $30,000 the biggest cheque of his nine-year-old professional career.

Charles Coody, who tied the course record of 65 and was one of several to challenge Douglass, finished at 278.

South African Gary Player, with a 69, and Australian Bruce Crampton, with a 70, tied at 279.

Arnold Palmer, the defending champion, made a run at it with a final 66 but finished at 280. He was tied with Joel Goldstrand, 69, Masters champion George Archer, 72, and England's Tony Jacklin, 71.

Lee Trevino had a 74 for a 284. U.S. Open champion Orville Moody had a 70 for 286 and PGA champ Julius Boros, 76 for 286.

Toronto's George Knudson finished with a one-under-par 71 to score 281 over the four rounds. He shared eighth place with Bob Charles, the left hander from New Zealand, and Larry Ziegler. They each won $3,750. Al Balding scored 73 Sunday for a 288 total and earned $200.

The victory was only the second of Douglass' career, and the second this season. He won the Azalea Open earlier this year.

Skins, Saints Trade

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington Redskins have traded veteran quarterback Jim Ninowski, 33, to New Orleans Saints for defensive-end Dave Long, 24, and an undisclosed draft choice.

Inflamed Ankles Shackle Fallen Majestic Prince

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Majestic Prince, who faltered in his quest of horse racing's Triple Crown, probably won't compete again until 1970, his trainer says.

The reason: Inflammation of both front ankles.

"I knew something was bothering him," Johnny Longden told reporters Sunday.

The three-year-old Kentucky Derby winner had scored a narrow victory in the Preakness, then lost the Belmont Stakes. Longden hadn't wanted him to go in the Belmont but was overruled by the owner, Frank McMahon of Calgary and Vancouver.

The ankle trouble isn't serious, Longden said, "but enough to keep him out of action quite awhile."

Racing observers expected something unusual when officials at Hollywood Park quietly dropped attempts last week to put together a $100,000 race for the end of the season including the Prince.

Longden scrapped plans for the colt to race this fall, including a fourth match with Arts and Letters, in Chicago.

Majestic Prince nipped Arts and Letters in the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness but lost to him by five lengths in the Belmont, the final Triple Crown race.

After the Preakness, Longden announced plans later to skip the Belmont and rest the horse.

McMahon overruled Longden, saying a horse has only one shot at the Triple Crown.

Longden recalled the result of that decision: "He wasn't right in that race but we could not pinpoint the trouble. We finally found out what was wrong when we got to Hollywood Park."

Penny Got Her Record But Not Hurdle Victory

Athletes Crack 14 Records In Y-Times Track Meeting

By STEVE HUME

Victoria's Penny May got the Canadian record she was gunning for at the Y-Times international track and field meet Saturday night, but it came with a bitter pill attached.

Miss May, who had been prepping to knock off current Canadian record holder Peggy Bush in the 200-metre hurdles, faltered coming over the last barrier to lose her race by fractions of an inch.

She was awarded an identical 28.5 seconds clocking with Miss Bush, however, to crack the old mark of 28.7.

The young Victoria sprinter was not the only athlete to crack a national mark while finishing second as 13 other Canadian and meet records were bettered or tied in the meet at Centennial Stadium.

Victoria Track Club's Wendy Thompson unleashed a powerful kick to finish second in the women's open mile behind Seattle Falcons' Vicki Foltz who set a meet record of 4:55.2.

Miss Thompson's time of 5:02.4 set a Canadian juvenile record and also cracked the B.C. native women's mark of 5:09.0.

The Seattle runner also dragged a Vancouver girl along to a Canadian age-class record in the women's open 880.

When the American flashed to a new meet record of 2:13.2, Joan Dyke of Richmond Track Club clocked 2:14.6 for a Canadian midget girls' mark.

Victoria prep ace Anne Langdale, who got a thumping from Stephanie Berto and Irene Piotrowski in the women's 100-yards, bounced back to clean up in the 220 event.

Miss Berto, who nipped Miss Langdale in the B.C. high school meet, blasted out with a 10.6 clocking in the 100 to tie the meet record.

Jerome's Two Sprint Records Tied

A pair of meet records established by Canadian Olympic athlete and former world record holder Harry Jerome were equalled despite dropping temperatures and overcast skies.

U.S. superstar Tommie Smith ripped off a spectacular 21.2 clocking in the 220, and Larry Matthews of Tacoma Track Club ran 9.5 in the 100-yard dash for open men.

A B.C. record went to Brenda Eisler of Vancouver who tied the old mark and set a new meet record with a long jump leap of 19 feet four and a half inches.

In the same vein, Bill Greenough of Vancouver set a new meet record in the triple jump, upsetting U.S. Olympic hopeful Steve Gough of Tacoma in the process.

Gough has jumped 50 feet, and Greenough, who has bettered 49, is the Canadian record holder, but Saturday he could only manage 48 feet, 10½ inches.

A new meet record also went to spectacular young Debbie Brill of Langley who bounced five feet, eight inches in the high jump, while Maureen Dowds tossed the women's shot to a meet mark of 44 feet, two and one-quarter inches.

The men's shot also produced a meet record as Roy Easton of Tacoma heaved the lead sphere 54 feet 10½ inches.

The 100-metre hurdles for women, a new event, had a new record set by Wendy Taylor of Vancouver, with Victoria's Miss May again finishing second.

And a new meet mark was set in the men's pole vault by Mark Edman of Tacoma.

Canadian clubs swept final standings in the meet, which drew athletes from 29 college, club and school teams.

Vancouver Olympic Club, with a powerful contingent of youngsters competing in age-class events held Friday night and Saturday morning, cornered the points in men's, and overall categories.

A combined total of 327 points earned VOC first place over Richmond Track Club with 282½, and Victoria Track Club with 221.

Nanaimo's girls knocked off favored Richmond, Victoria and VOC to earn a winning total of 143 points, but VOC boys countered that with a winning 221 total over Vancouver Optimist Striders with 160 and Richmond with 144.

Few Remain To See Vaulter Earn Award

Almost invisible in the pitch black at the end of the runway, the athlete began his gallop toward the pit—an isolated oasis of lights pooling before the grandstands.

The pole vault, as usual, was running behind schedule, the Centennial Stadium bleachers were empty, and a tour de force performance by four athletes was coming to a close before 20 huddled spectators, several tired officials and the impatient press.

Light rain was starting to spit out of the cold sky, and vaulter Rick Burrows of Vancouver had been carried away to receive attention for a leg injury after clearing 15 feet in the annual international track and field meet co-sponsored by the Victoria YM-YWCA and The Daily Times.

Most of the few remaining fans were probably wondering what sort of masochism drove some men to perform after the crowd had fled, and kept others glued to the pit.

However, Mark Edman, a young jumper from the Tacoma Track Club, knew what he was doing.

He flashed into the light bathing the pit, his fibreglass pole sproinged, Edman heaved himself over the bar at 15 feet, nine inches and plunged down into the foam rubber cushioning.

First Four Shattered Former Mark

The leap set a new meet record, upping the mark by a whopping one foot, nine inches, and was likely the highest any vaulter has previously gone on Vancouver Island.

What made the pole vault so exciting at this year's Y-Times international meet was the fact that the top four places broke the record and fifth place tied it

Curtis Hislaw went over at 15 feet, six inches, Alan Kane of Simon Fraser University and former record holder Burrows both cleared 15 feet, and Victoria's Gerard Dumas tied the old mark at 14 feet.

Edman's effort earned him recognition as the meet's outstanding male athlete, although, ironically, almost all of the 2,000 fans who had occupied stadium seats for open finals earlier Saturday night had gone home.

On the distaff side of things, a pair of youngsters shared the outstanding female athlete award.

Debbie Brill of Langley, an age-class competitor who likes it in the thick of open events, soared five feet, eight inches in the high jump to set a meet record. Her efforts are a scant inch short of the open women's B.C. and Canadian marks held by Diana Gerace of Trail.

And Stephanie Berto, the Vancouver ace who won the B.C. schologirl sprint title recently, flashed through the open 100 yards to edge Olympic star Irene Piotrowski.

Her 10.6-second clocking tied the meet record and was two-tenths of a second off the Canadian and B.C. record held by Mrs. Piotrowski, and three-tenths off the world mark for women.

Sophomores Spring Big Track Surprises

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Sophomores Curtis Mills of Texas A&M and Marty Liquori of Villanova scored stunning upsets Saturday in the NCAA track and field championships won by San Jose State behind the explosive running of John Carlos.

Mills broke the world record in the 440-yard dash, running the quarter-mile in 44.7 seconds and nipping Olympic-champion Lee Evans of San Jose at the tape. Liquori uncorked a courageous finishing kick and whipped world record-holder Jim Ryun of Kansas by 10 yards in the mile, winning in 3:57.7.

Numerous NCAA meet records toppled, including the pole vault standard—boosted to 17 feet seven-and one-half inches by Olympic-champion Bob Seagren of Southern Cal.

Other highlights included a seven foot, two-and one-half inch high jump by Olympic-champion Dick Fosbury of Oregon State, who repeated as champion. So did John Van Reenen of Washington State, who threw the discus 200 feet, eight inches, and Byron Dyck of New York University, who lowered the 880 yards collegiate record to 1:45.9.

RACING ROUNDUP

Jumpin Joseph Plate Winner

(Times News Services)

Governor-General Roland Michener was on hand with his Horse Guards to provide pageant at the 110th running of the Queen's Plate Saturday, but a 40-year-old Cuban native and a passive three-year-old colt stole the show at Toronto's Woodbine Park.

Jumpin Joseph, the even-odds favorite of a record crowd of 32,806, sped across the finish line to win North America's oldest stakes horse race.

The time on the fast track over 1¼ miles was a slow two minutes, 4 1-5 seconds.

Avelino Gomez, born in Cuba, rode Jumpin Joseph to become the only jockey to win four Queen's Plate races. The veteran, who won the North American riding championship in 1967, won five races in as many mounts Saturday.

Jumpin Joseph, a relaxed three-year-old chestnut colt, is owned by Warren Beasley of Toronto and trained by Bill Bateman.

CHARGED INTO LEAD

Jumpin Joseph was in complete command of the 14-horse field. The colt held back in fifth place for the first half-mile and edged into third heading into the final turn. He then charged into the lead down the stretch to beat Fanfaron, owned by Jean Louis Levesque of Montreal, by slightly more than two lengths.

Fire n Desire, owned by Lloyd Duffy and Joe Lima of Toronto, was third by a neck.

Elsewhere with the sport of kings, Mrs. Whitney Stone's Shuvee toyed with six rivals before winning the $119,625 Coaching Club American Oaks at Belmont Park to take the New York Racing Association's "Triple Crown" for three-year-old fillies.

In adding the 1¼-mile Oaks to her victories in the Acorn and Mother Goose, Shuvee got home in 2:03 1-5, three lengths ahead of Hail to Patsy, also the runner-up in the first two legs of the triple. Secret Verdict was third.

At Inglewood, Calif., Fort Marcy and jockey Manuel Ycaza won the $100,000 Hollywood Invitational Turf Handicap in a rousing photo finish. Fort Marcy beat the lightly-regarded Poleax by a nose, with Court Fool third.

At Vancouver, Frank McMahon's entry of Regal Jingle and Royal Consort cleaned up in the $7,500-added Lieutenant-Governor's Handicap at Exhibition Park.

Regal Jingle, third winner of the day under Basil Frazier, was three lengths ahead of Royal Consort. The pair, trained by Vance Longden, was comfortably ahead of Broken Bubble.

The win was the first in three starts at Exhibition Park this season for Regal Jingle, British Columbia's "horse-of-the-year" in 1968.

Salmonbellies Rock Juniors

Victoria Shamrocks dropped a 24-11 decision to New Westminster Salmonbellies Sunday in Memorial Arena during their first home appearance in the Inter-City Junior "A" Lacrosse League.

Scorers for Victoria were Murray Muralt and Dennis Somner, with three each, Mike Beaulac and Darryl Hooker, with two each, and Tom Somner with one.

At Richmond, Victoria MacDonald's Bakery fared better in Inter-City Junior "B" action, collecting a 16-5 win over Richmond Farmers.

THEO BOOKER
. . . double winner

Busy Taylor Reaps Silver

It cost him a few extra pints of gasoline and some overtime toil, but Marty Taylor probably will remember June 21 as a hectic but profitable Saturday.

For all his efforts, including 11 sets of tennis, Taylor wound up with an armful of silverware that came with victory in four finals at two different clubs.

He won both singles titles and shared doubles honors with Pat Skillings and Ivor Goodmanson. Taylor, also well-known for his soccer prowess, defeated Skillings in the Racquet Club's singles final, then rushed to Oak Bay Tennis Club to defeat Greg Miller.

He returned to the Racquet Club to join Skillings in claiming the men's doubles, rushed back to Oak Bay to repeat with Goodmanson as his partner.

Also sharing the spotlight on the courts Saturday were Sally Wood and Theo Booker. Sally captured the women's singles at the Racquet Club and also claimed a share of the women's and mixed doubles.

Miss Booker also played in three finals, was successful in two. She defeated Faith Graham 7-5, 6-1 to reign as Oak Bay's singles queen and then teamed up with veteran Howard Tooby to share the mixed tiara.

Doug Roxburgh . . .   . . . Youngest Since Leonard

TEEN-AGER NEW CHAMPION

VANCOUVER (CP) — Doug Roxburgh, 17, Saturday defeated John Morgan, 27, to become the youngest player in 37 years to win the British Columbia amateur golf championship.

He scored a 4 and 3 victory in the 36-hole final on the windswept Richmond Country Club course. Roxburgh plays at Vancouver Marine Drive, Morgan at Vancouver Quilchena.

Roxburgh is about six months older than Stan Leonard of Vancouver was when he won the title in 1932.

Roxburgh never trailed in Saturday's match, taking a two-hole lead in the morning round. His medal score was 73 while Morgan's was 75. The junior quickly took command of the match on the second 18 holes.

He played the front nine in 33, three under par, to take a five-hole lead.

The win virtually assured Roxburgh of making B.C.'s Willingdon Cup team.

The four-man squad will be selected following the B.C. Invitational Amateur Golf tournament in Victoria July 5-6.

Denford Inherits Top Spot

Lake Cowichan came up with the home runs but Colwood Inn slipped away with a pair of victories Sunday to change the order atop the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League.

Catcher Lou Shreenan slapped out two home runs, Romeo Krakowec and Ken Berry each added one to Cowichan's total, but Colwood swept two games, 4-3 and 7-5, to nudge the Lakers out of top spot.

Into the lead went Denford Electric, who traded one-run decisions with last-place Sooke. Denford followed a 5-4 Saturday night victory over B.C. Telephone by clipping Sooke 7-6. Sooke won the second game, 5-4.

Green defeated Lionel Nichols, 21-11, while Fleck downed clubmate Jim Pollock, 21-18, Saturday to emerge as the singles winners in the two-section playoffs at Oak Bay greens.

Provincial champions will advance to the national finals to be held Aug. 25-27 at Oak Bay.

Cowichan Powered By Jocelyn

Cowichan and Albion both hurdled past Incogs Sunday to take a 1-2 position atop the Victoria and District Cricket Association standings.

Cowichan, paced by the hurricane hitting of Peter Jocelyn, jumped into the lead by recording an exciting, seven-wicket victory over Incogs at Shawnigan Lake.

Albion took second after defeating Alcos by nine wickets at Windsor Park.

In a Saturday match, Castaways took fourth place by defeating Oak Bay. Castaways scored 127 for nine wickets declared, then held Oak Bay to 54 runs, all out.

EXCITING FINISH

But the greatest dramatics were reserved for the Shawnigan field. Incogs, batting first, were all out for 127 in an innings interrupted by rain. Left with only 70 minutes of batting, Cowichan went after runs from the start. Cowichan passed Incogs with only two minutes to spare.

Jocelyn scored 77 not out in a great display of free hitting as Cowichan hit 133 for the loss of only three wickets.

At Windsor Park, a rare bowling accomplishment featured Albion's victory.

Alcos, batting first, were all out after scoring 32 runs due to the fine bowling of Alec Porter. The Albion bowler recorded the unusual feat of taking all 10 wickets for 20 runs. Albion had no difficulty in putting 34 on the board for the loss of only one wicket.

Vancouver Merchants finished with a 5-0 record in the British Columbia senior men's open softball championships and Sunday won the B.C. berth in the Canadian summer games in Halifax in August.

Merchants won the title Sunday with a come-from-behind 4-3 victory over Vancouver Jonstons in the final of the double knockout contest. They defeated Johnstons 5-0 in a semi-final earlier.

Merchants broke a 3-3 tie in the bottom of the seventh when Bob Carrick tripled to the centre field fence, and came home when Johnstons' second baseman Gary Carelli bobbled a grounder.

FANS FOUR

Vern Moberg went the route for the winners, striking out four and walking none.

Johnstons finished the tourney with a 3-2 record and Vancouver Molsons, who eliminated all the Vancouver Island teams, were finished with a 4-2 record.

Vancouver Molsons knocked the Molsons of Victoria out of the running early Saturday, 4-3. Bates, rated one of the pre-tourney favorites, were upset 2-0 by Vancouver M and M, then dropped a 9-2 decision to Vancouver Molsons in an error-filled game.

Meanwhile, in Saskatoon, Saskatoon Merchants won the Saskatchewan playdowns by defeating Saskatoon Burnells 1-0 Sunday.

'Little Mo' Loses Fight With Cancer

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Maureen "Little Mo" Connolly Brinker, who ruled the women's tennis world from 1951-1954 before a horseback riding accident ended her career, died Saturday of cancer. She was 34.

She had suffered from the disease since 1966 but still was active in teaching young people the fundamentals of the game she loved.

Three times she won both the Wimbledon and United States titles. In 1953, she scored an unprecedented grand slam, winning the U.S., Wimbledon, French and Australian championships.

"Little Mo" married businessman Norman Brinker in 1955. They had two children—Cindy, 12, and Brenda, 10.

She underwent her third operation for a stomach tumor June 4 at Baylor Hospital. Brinker admitted privately at the time that it would take a miracle for her to survive over the long haul.

Stolle Sharp In Net Finale

LONDON (AP) — Fred Stolle, three times Wimbledon runner-up but never the champion, warmed up for the big tennis tournament Saturday by defeating John Newcombe, 6-3, 22-20, for the London grass courts title at Queen's Club.

Wimbledon started today and the two Australians turned their match into a rugged workout. They battled for almost two hours in the second set.

Stolle picked up a first prize of $1,200 and Newcombe won $600.

Stolle was Wimbledon runner-up in 1963, 1964 and 1965. Newcombe won the Wimbledon title in 1967.

The women's singles final was a one-sided affair between two British girls. Mrs. Ann Jones shattered Winnie Shaw, 6-0, 6-1, for a first prize of $720. Miss Shaw got $360.

Title Hunters 'Nicked' Again

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Nick Weslock, the man considered by many to be washup up last year as a competitive golfer, made a pressure-packed comeback Saturday to win his seventh Ontario Open golf championship.

Weslock rolled in a curling 18-foot putt on the final hole for a 54-hole total of 208, one stroke better than Phil Giroux of Cartierville, Que., who had led by four strokes with three holes to play.

The lead seemed insurmountable, unless Giroux kicked it away. He didn't. Instead, Weslock rolled in a 22-foot putt for an eagle on 16, parred the short 17th, then sank his long putt on No. 18. Giroux, meanwhile, went one over par on the 17th, and when his 10-footer on the 18th hole faded to the low side of the hole, Weslock had his victory.

He called it his sweetest victory ever.

OTHERS NEAR TOP

Giroux's finish earned him $2,000, top professional money. Second pro money of $1,400 went to Ken Fulton who finished tied with Jim Neale of Burlington, Ont., at 213, three under par.

Two Victoria professionals both finished in the money. Bill Wakeham, only four strokes off the pace going into Saturday's round, couldn't find his best putting form and carded a 76 to tie for 11th place with a 218 total.

Wakeham, the last professional to win the Ontario Open, in 1967, won $475.

Vaughan Trapp, also of Victoria, came up with his best round, a two-under 70, to finish with 222 and win $230.

Three players were tied at 214: amateur Gary Cowan of Kitchener, who won the event last year, and professionals Wilf Homeniuk of Winnipeg and Trevor Bateman of La Salle, Que. Homeniuk and Bateman each won $1,000.

Bob Panasiuk of Windsor had 215, and Gary Bowerman of Richmond Hill and Gary Slatter of Lucayan, Grand Bahama, each had 216, even par:

JUDY: Brought Tears, Joy to Millions But Suffered Depths of Personal Despair

"WIZARD OF OZ" was Judy Garland's most famous film, which she played at 17 in the role of Dorothy. With her were the Tin Woodman (Jack Haley) and Scarecrow (Ray Bolger).

LONDON (CP) — "Audiences have kept me 'alive,'" Judy Garland once said. But a London surgeon says the star was "living on borrowed time," and time ran out Sunday for the 47-year-old singing star.

Miss Garland, who made more than 35 films but was best known for her role as a little girl named Dorothy in The Wizard of Oz, was found dead by her fifth husband, Mickey Deans, in the bathroom of her London home.

British newspapers labelled the death "sudden and mysterious" but Scotland Yard ruled out suicide and police said there was no suspicion of foul play.

Dr. Phillip Lebon, a prominent London surgeon who had treated Miss Garland for several years, said she had cirrhosis of the liver and that death could have come any time. "How she lived this long I don't know," he said.

A Scotland Yard spokesman commented: "It was a simple, plain case of sudden death."

'How She Lived This Long . . . I Don't Know'

Miss Garland had been married to Deans, a 35-year-old former New York discotheque manager, for 100 days. A friend, singer Gina Dangerfields, said: "Judy was feeling on top of the world. They were very much in love and it seemed that she had found happiness at last."

The singer, who brought tears and joy to millions of fans by singing of a dream world Over the Rainbow, often suffered the depths of personal despair.

The Judy Garland story was one of pills, divorces, on-stage collapses, illnesses, audiences that booed her and finished by yelling: "We love you Judy!" She attempted suicide several times. In the most publicized attempt, she slashed her throat at the age of 28.

But just when Miss Garland appeared washed up, she bounced back again. After she married Deans March 15, she told reporters: "Finally, finally I am loved."

'We Love You' Yells Climaxed Many Performances

Miss Garland's body was taken to Westminster Mortuary.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Born Frances Gumm on June 10, 1922, in Grand Rapids, Minn., she was the youngest of three daughters in a vaudeville team. It is said she made her first stage appearance in a Grand Rapids theatre at the age of 30 months, singing Jingle Bells, and that she was so thrilled by performing that her father had to pull her off the stage after she'd sung the number seven times.

A child star from the age of three, Miss Garland changed her name at the suggestion of George Jessel. Her first film in 1935 was a two-reel short called Every Sunday Afternoon, but her first well-known movie was Pigskin Parade. Her 1939 role in the Wizard of Oz catapulted her into the hearts of millions.

In 1940, 1941 and 1945 she was named one of the 10 highest paid stars in Hollywood, earning $150,000 a film. Her series of movies with Mickey Rooney in the Andy Hardy stories were a hit, and are still revived occasionally on television.

Her movies are estimated to have earned $100,000,000, but tragedy dogged her. At 18 she was under psychiatric care and consuming many kinds of pills.

'Nothing Can Destroy That Love, Legend She Created'

She was divorced four times —in 1944 after a three-year marriage to composer David Rose; in 1951, after a six-year marriage to director Vincent Minelli; in 1965, after a 13-year marriage to Sid Luft, her manager; and finally from actor Mark Herron, after a marriage of 19 months.

Her children—Singer Liza Minelli and Lorna, 16, and Joseph Luft, 14—said in a statement issued in New York:

"We loved our mother very much, and it was a love that we shared with millions of other people.

"The only thing that really comforts us now is the thought that nothing can destroy that love, or the legend she created. To us, that was, and always will be, a beautiful thing."

"She was a unique entertainer, a wonderful singer," said actor Eli Wallach. "It's tragic. She is somehow the painful product of the worst part of Hollywood."

FRAGILE, CONFUSED

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — To millions of Americans watching a rerun of the Johnny Carson show on Saturday night, she seemed like a caricature of the Judy Garland they once knew.

This was not the plaintive Dorothy of The Wizard of Oz musing about blue birds flying over the rainbow. Nor was she Vickie Lester of A Star Is Born, lamenting over the man who got away.

On the Carson show, which was taped June 24, 1968, she seemed fragile, confused and frightened. Despite the heavy makeup, she looked all of her then 46 years.

Yet after a tentative beginning, she responded to Carson's patient questioning and began telling hilarious stories of her vaudeville days. She left the stage to immense applause.

"Basically she's a very shy person," Carson commented to his next guest, Bennett Cerf. "But once she gets started she's marvellous."

Her millions of fans learned Sunday that Judy Garland had died in her London home. To them it seemed there had always been Judy—first the winning girl with a loud, clear voice, then the trouble-plagued woman with an immense capacity for comeback.

TROUBLES NUMEROUS

Her travails were numerous. The firings by studios. The marriages. The on-stage collapses. The ill health, some of it self-inflicted.

But Judy had amazing recuperative powers. Each time disaster struck, she managed to resume her career with a new triumph: a sensational appearance at the New York Palace, a television series, a dramatic role in Judgment at Nuernberg.

In recent years her comeback facility seemed to be failing. She returned to Hollywood two years for a role in Valley of the Dolls that appeared to be based on her own pill-ridden history. After two weeks she was replaced by Susan Hayward.

Her death will doubtless cause an outpouring of articles and books about the miseries of stardom, as happened with Marilyn Monroe.

Judy herself provided the keynote in one of her last articles:

"I've heard how 'difficult' it is to be with Judy Garland. Do you know how difficult it is to BE Judy Garland? And for ME to live with me? I've had to do it—and what more unkind life can you think of than the one I've lived?"

'CRIED LIKE A BABY'

NEW YORK (AP) — Ray Bolger, who 30 years ago created the role of the scarecrow in the Wizard of Oz, said Sunday he cried like a baby when he heard the news report of Judy Garland's death in London.

The 1939 film, often revived and one of the triumphs of Miss Garland's career, was the one in which she sang the song that ever after was identified with her, Over the Rainbow.

"After playing with her in the Wizard of Oz, I just had to love her," said Bolger, 65.

'BRING BACK ALL YOU WANT'

By THOMAS O'TOOLE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In a quiet change of policy, the space agency has lifted its limits on the quantity of moon sample the Apollo 11 astronauts can bring back to earth.

In effect, astronauts Neil Armstrong and Edwin (Buzz) Aldrin have been told they can bring back as much of the moon as they can carry when they land there July 20.

This means they'll probably return with as much as 100 pounds of dust, dirt and rock dug up from the moon, twice as much as they could have brought back under former instructions.

Past policy would have restricted the first lunar sample to 50 pounds, partly because Apollo officials felt the LEM landing craft might have trouble lifting a larger load off the moon.

"This was too conservative a view," an Apollo official said in explaining the new move. "We're no longer worried about the LEM's lifting ability."

Another reason for the 50-pound limit had been concern that it would be too much trouble for the astronauts to bring back more, since they would have to spend that much more time out of their three hours on the moon digging, weighing and packing it.

The way things stood, Armstrong would have dug up about 25 pounds of moon dirt and packed it in an airtight box.

Then, Armstrong and Aldrin would have spent about 35 minutes scooping up another 25 pounds, photographing, weighing and labelling it as they placed these "documented" samples in 14 separate bags.

Lately, scientists at the manned spacecraft centre in Houston argued that Armstrong and Aldrin should not waste their time weighing and packing this second sample.

It is far more important, the scientists stressed, that the astronauts spend their time collecting as much of the moon as they can. Even if they do it in somewhat haphazard fashion.

100 Hurt in Clash At Rock Festival

NORTHRIDGE, Calif. (AP) — About 100 persons were injured as police and young people clashed in scattered incidents as officers tried to prevent thousands of fans from crashing the gates at a rock festival.

Police called a tactical alert Sunday as the Newport 69 festival and arrested about 100 persons on marijuana, dangerous drug, assault and drunkenness charges.

As many as 50,800 persons from several western states attended each day of the three-day event at this Los Angeles suburb.

Seventeen officers were among those injured.

At the height of the trouble Sunday, about 200 Los Angeles policemen patrolled outside the first of two chain-link fences for youths climbing over to avoid the $7 admission fee to hear the big-name rock bands. A force of about 100 private guards were inside the fence.

Officers were pelted with rocks, bottles and sticks.

There was no major trouble Friday. About 25 persons were arrested Saturday.

AWARD of Electrical Man of the Year was presented to Gordon Merritt Shrum, chairman of British Columbia Hydro, today at the annual meeting of the Canadian Electrical Association by Electrical News and Engineering, the publication which makes the award annually. It was given for Mr. Shrum's direction of the Peace River Power Project.

Runaway At Top Speed

PENTICTION (CP) — A heavy Canadian Pacific rail scooter capable of carrying four workmen and their equipment raced unattended at top speed for more than 17 miles Saturday before being purposely derailed by railway employees.

The speeder went the distance, crossing 20 railroad crossings and zipping through this city of 14,000, without causing a mishap.

Officials said the unit was taken from a locked toolhouse eight miles northeast of Penticton and its motor started on the steep grade down into the city. Residents notified the line of the runaway rail car but it was able to make West Summerland prior to being halted.

A spokesman said the unit had sufficient gasoline to have taken it to Princeton, 40 air miles west of here.

Tough Polar Bears Biggest Risk

PORTSMOUTH, England (AP) — The first four men to walk across the polar ice cap returned to land today and said the biggest danger was from polar bears so tough they ate rubber boots and sniffed at high-velocity bullets.

Suntanned as though they had spent 16 months on a beach instead of in the frozen north, the four British explorers docked here aboard the Royal Navy ice patrol ship Endurance, accompanied by two yapping huskies named Eskimos Nell and Apple Dog.

The team, led by bearded surveyor Wally Herbert, set out from Alaska in February, 1968, trekked 3,620 miles over the frozen wastes, landed on small Blackboard Island May 30 this year and then got picked up by a helicopter after 477 days on the treacherous ice floes.

"The first thing I want is some good food," said Maj. Ken Hedges, an unarmed combat expert from the expedition. The team lived on frozen meat bars and "none of us were particularly good cooks." The team was often supplied by Canadian airforce planes.

Polar bears, Herbert told reporters, were as big a menace as cracking ice, and the beasts were fearless because they hadn't seen human beings before.

"We had to shoot quite a number of them," he said.

MIGHT HAVE ATTACKED

The team leader didn't give casualty figures, but said they killed bears who came closer than 15 feet from the group because they could have attacked the explorers or mauled the essential sled dogs.

"When we fired warning shots at them they just sniffed the snow where the bullets hit," said one of the four. Dr. Roy (Fritz) Koerner said he tossed one of Herbert's cumbersome rubber snow boots at an inquisitive polar bear "and he tore it to shreds and ate it."

The team battled across the ice in temperatures as low as 45 degrees below zero Fahrenheit. Herbert said they built igloos for shelter and the temperature inside the ice huts was "quite comfortable—28 below zero."

ALEC ROSE ON HAND

The team's ill-tempered husky dogs were another problem, Hedges said. Three of them killed each other in fights. But the explorers gave them comic names and Hedges said: "You can't get very angry with a dog called Bubbles."

The two dogs the explorers brought back will be used for breeding in England.

The men were greeted aboard the ship by their families, senior naval officers, veteran explorer Sir Vivian Fuchs, round-the-world yachtsman Sir Alec Rose, and their radio operator Freddie Church who kept in touch with the Arctic team from T3, the American ice island near the North Pole.

"It seemed like conquering a horizontal Everest," said Herbert.

He said the expedition gathered a lot of useful scientific information but he regarded it mainly as an adventure. Now, he said, with few challenges left in the world "what I will have to do is find another Everest or change my profession or something like that."

The fourth member of the team, anchorman Allan Gill, said the first few months were the most frightening, until the men got used to the fearsome noises of shifting ice.

A few hours before they were picked up by helicopter, Herbert said, the ice floe they were on cracked and broke only 12 feet away.

Playful Porpoises Save Drowning Man

PORT LAVACA, Tex. (AP) — Shrimp boat captain E. J. Lemaire, 55, says he owes his life to friendly propoises that helped him after he fell overboard last Tuesday.

Lemaire fell into the Gulf of Mexico five miles from the nearest landfall, Matagorda Island, and no one aboard the craft noticed.

He began swimming and soon found himself accompanied by a playful school of porpoises that nudged him, pushed him and nearly carried him to shore, Lemaire said.

Finally rescued from the island, he said he would never have made it had it not been for the porpoises.

He is recovering from shock and dehydration.

Seed Centre Gathers Crop For 10 Years

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Forbes

Pick up a tree cone. Fir, spruce, pine or hemlock. Turn it over. Look at it carefully. Now, tell me. How would you extract the seed?

You don't know? Neither did I. Until I visited the Forest Service Seed Centre at Duncan recently and Bruce Devitt, forester in charge up there, took time to spell it out for me.

It's an amazing process! Cones (millions of them) are put through an operation that includes drying, tumbling and bouncing to release their precious seeds. "Living gold," as Bruce Devitt calls them.

These in turn are scalped (that's the word) de-winged and thoroughly cleaned before being poured into cellophane bags and placed in storage for planting.

The Duncan centre supplies seed for all forest districts in the province.

★ ★ ★

Standing in front of the storage sheds where 18 thousand sacks of cones can be kept on wooden slatted shelves at one time, this doesn't look too difficult a task.

To Bruce Devitt and his assistants, however, it means gazing into the future and deciding how many cones will be needed, how many seeds they will disgorge and the over-all total of requests for seed and seedlings. Not for a year. Not for two years. But over the next 10 years.

You see, Mother Nature is stingy. She doesn't produce fertile cones in a 12-month cycle. She gives only one good crop in every 10 years.

That's why seed forester Devitt and his men must make an educated guess and from it maintain a supply of seeds and seedling at the Duncan centre to last over the sterile period.

What is needed is "a reliable crystal ball," Bruce Devitt says, for there are so many intangibles that can and sometimes do, alter ever an educated guess.

Cones are picked in forest districts throughout the province and sent in to the Duncan centre. Each bag is marked with a tag (different colors for different districts) showing place name, ranger district and the collector.

★ ★ ★

They are taken from storage shelves, and dumped from the sacks on wire screen trays in a dry kiln room in the heart extraction plant. Here they are "cooked and dried" to make them open and ready to give up their seed.

Temperature in the kiln must be watched carefully. "It must always be remembered that what we are handling here must remain alive," the seed forester explained.

Fans in the roof of the kiln, working clockwise and then counter-clockwise on a three-hour cycle, help do the trick.

It takes approximately 24 hours to put a batch through (250 to 300 bushels). At the height of the extraction season, there's one lot going in and another coming out, seven days a week without a break.

When they come out of the kiln, the dried cones are placed on a moving conveyor belt in a huge drum. Here, in a rough and tumble process, seeds are dropped into containers below the belt and the husks are discarded.

★ ★ ★

Now it's the seeds turn to be pushed and shoved around.

They go through a commercial type vacuum cleaner ("adapted to our special needs," Mr. Devitt says) where they are scalped and de-winged. That means sucking and blowing off tiny spurs that are of no further use.

They are tossed into what looks like an out-sized cement mixer for a cleaning. They go into another machine where bits of rock, husks and other debris are separated and discarded.

Finally they end up on a gravity table where continuous vibration divides the heavy from the light and tosses out any junk that is left.

Now, Bruce Devitt and his staff can be reasonably sure they have a lot that is 90 per cent pure and 95 per cent fertile. So the seeds are sent on to a room where they are bagged in pound lots, ready for storage.

The bags are tagged—again to show where the cones were picked—and a sample goes to an efficient little laboratory in the office block at the centre for final analysis.

At present over-all sowings in various forest districts in the province give 52 to 53 million new trees annually. By 1975, Bruce Devitt predicts this will increase to 75 million.

He'll never see the final results of these sowings. It takes a forest tree 75 to 80 years to reach maturity.

Fir seedling . . . 80 years to grow.

Reds Vow To Shut Down Post Bureau

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Soviet Union Friday told the United States that it would be compelled to close the Moscow bureau of The Washington Post if the paper continued to publish the articles by Anatole Shub.

Alexander P. Yevstafyev, press counsellor at the Soviet Embassy, called on Adolph Dubs, acting director of the state department's office of the Soviet Union, and characterized the series of articles, written by Shub after he was expelled from Russia on May 23, as "filthy attacks."

According to a state department spokesman, Dubs rejected out of hand the characterization and told the Soviet official that Shub was an independent journalist and The Post an independent newspaper.

Dubs then asked Yevstafyev why he had not complained to the Post, but got no answer.

The articles were published in the Victoria Times this week.

Shub was expelled from Russia for alleged anti-Soviet writings, and given 48 hours to leave the country. In retaliation, the United States expelled a Tass correspondent on the same terms.

De Gaulle Role Open to Guess

PARIS (WP) — Former president Charles de Gaulle has returned to France amid intense speculation over how much influence he will exert on his newly elected successor, Georges Pompidou.

In the past few days there have been widespread reports in the French press that De Gaulle will serve as an active "watchdog" on the new administration.

The 78-year-old general is reported to have lobbied to insure that his foreign policy objectives are maintained, and his intention to make his presence felt was underscored by the announcement this week that De Gaulle will establish offices and an unofficial headquarters in Paris.

De Gaulle left France for a vacation in Ireland shortly after his April 28 resignation, turning his back on the succession race.

He issued no endorsement of Pompidou and throughout the campaign his closest collaborators seemed more intent on pressuring Pompidou to toe the line of Gaullist orthodoxy than in working for the Gaullist candidate's victory.

The general's only public political act during his self-imposed exile was a telegram of congratulations to Pompidou after his election Sunday.

Largest Tanker Christened

YOKOHAMA, Japan (Reuters) —The world's largest oil tanker, the Universe Korea, was christened Saturday. The 326,000-ton tanker is the fifth in a series of six tankers of 300,000 tons or more ordered by a New York firm, National Bulk Carriers Inc. The vessel, which cost about $20,000,000 to build, is 1,133 feet long, 105 feet high and can carry 2,500,000 barrels of oil.

Thieu Asks Body To Study Election

SAIGON (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam is reported to have asked his advisers and cabinet ministers to consider setting up a joint commission of government and Viet Cong representatives to study procedures for electing a post-war government.

Informed sources reported that Thieu is trying to get solid governmental and military backing for the proposal before it is put before the Viet Cong.

The man mentioned to represent the government on the commission is Duong Van Minh —Big Minh—the popular general who led the 1963 overthrow of President Ngo Dinh Diem. Minh returned to South Vietnam from political exile last year but has stayed out of the limelight.

Government and United States sources would not comment on the report.

Usually reliable informants said Thieu is not likely to disclose his plan but is mainly concerned with ensuring support from his generals, who are suspicious of any dealings with the Viet Cong.

Thieu is reported to have told President Nixon during their Midway talks June 8 that he would press the Viet Cong delegation in Paris to discuss election procedures. His moves in Saigon were seen as a preliminary step.

WANTS SECRET TALKS

Informants said the South Vietnamese president wants such talks with the Viet Cong to be secret and might refuse to discuss the issue at the peace table or in public.

Prior agreement within the South Vietnamese government on a specific proposal would strengthen the government delegation's position in Paris, and Thieu evidently is striving for that.

Iit also would enable the delegation to respond quickly if a proposal were to come from the Viet Cong.

The sources in Saigon said that the Viet Cong's provisional revolutionary government has made no election proposal in Paris and that no change in the current stalemate there is seen for at least two or three months.

In addition to the discussions on election procedures, Thieu is reported considering action on such measures as land reform and some administrative changes to strengthen his government. But reliable informants said no decisions have been taken on those matters.

Newsman Heads Museum Board

OTTAWA (CP) — David Spurgeon, 44-year-old science reporter for the Toronto Globe and Mail, has been appointed vice-chairman of the board of trustees of the National Museums of Canada, the state secretary's department announced.

The announcement corrects a department news release earlier which said Mr. Spurgeon had been appointed to the board.

Mr. Spurgeon, who also is editor of Science Forum, has been a board member since the body was established in early 1968.

HEADS COVERED PLEASE, LADIES

VATICAN CITY (AP)—The secretary of the Vatican Congregation for Divine Worship said Saturday that Roman Catholic women must still cover their heads in church.

Rt. Rev. Annibale Bugnini said reports on May 2 that the Vatican had ended the 1,900-year-old rule were "false, a terrible mistake".

So fill your heart with happiness, invite a friend to share your joy. See the roses now! Developed from an abandoned cement quarry, the Butchart Gardens are one of the world's most famous, most beautiful gardens. Actually six gardens in one — fabulous Sunken, Lake Garden featuring the spectacular "Ross Fountains," English, Rose, stately Italian, quaint Japanese and the great Stage Show Garden. ALL ROMANTICALLY ILLUMINATED EVERY EVENING. Under the night lighting they're entirely different, unbelievably beautiful. The fabulous Sunken Garden and Ross Fountains alone are worth going to see. ENTERTAINMENT TOO! Every Saturday, Sunday, 1 to 3 p.m., the "Butchart Gardens Buskers" (roving band of six very entertaining, extremely talented musicians) will add to your enjoyment. COWICHAN FOREST MUSEUM — "Best time we've had yet." This is the comment we often hear from vacationers stopping in to enjoy the attractions of this unique showplace. Here on beautifully timbered lakeside grounds is a display of rare old logging equipment that once harvested the resources of British Columbia's great forests. For those fond of the outdoors there are tree-lined paths showing the visitor the mysteries of woodland growth. You can enjoy the whole scene aboard a stout little steam train chugging around a narrow-gauge track. There is nothing stuffy about this museum, located on Highway No. 1, one mile north of Duncan. Youngsters have as much pleasure as their parents. Open daily 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

ROYAL LONDON WAX MUSEUM—In the Crystal Garden Swimming Pool building across from the back entrance of The Empress Hotel. See over 100 life-size Josephine Tussaud wax figures direct from London, England, including newly arrived scenes of President Richard M. Nixon of the United States and "The Martyrs of Hope" scene with John Fitzgerald Kennedy and Martin Luther King; Canada's Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau. See the Famous of Yesterday and Today. The Hall of Famous People, The Chilling Chamber of Horrors and the Enchanted Fairyland. The Royal London Wax Museum has entertainment for the whole family. Open 9 a.m. - 10 p.m. including Sundays. 388-4461.

See the mysterious marine world above and below the sea; Haida the killer whale star of our show, seals, sea lions, sea birds; WORLD'S LARGEST DISPLAY OF OCTOPUSES; Canada's largest display of salmon; wolf eels; hundreds of fascinating sea creatures. Exciting divers show. Five separate underwater pools with large five-foot viewing windows (some over your head). Open 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily on scenic Marine Drive at OAK BAY MARINA. Remember there's more to see at Sealand.

UNDERSEA GARDENS—UNDERSEA GARDENS—UNDERSEA GARDENS—Descend beneath the sea for an eye-opening display of more than 3,000 creatures of the deep in their natural habitat. Huge new underwater theatre makes regular shows more fun, easier to watch. Special filtering technique assures clear water so you don't miss a thing. Students Finish Piano Exams

Youngsters in several Greater Victoria elementary schools have been learning to play the piano and studying music through classes established over the last two years.

Recently piano class examinations—both practical and theory—were held to conclude the two-year course. They were sponsored by the Canadian Bureau for the Advancement of Music with the approval of local school boards.

At present there are not enough teachers to meet the demands of schools wanting piano classes, but it is hoped that through a training course in class methods to be held July 2-5, there will be some expansion next term.

Super War Jet Guarantee Of Swedish Independence

By DAN MORGAN
The Washington Post

STOCKHOLM — Sweden appears to have won at least one more decade in which to follow its own road to peace and neutrality, unencumbered by military dependence on the super powers.

The new guarantor of Sweden's middle way foreign policy is the Viggen "37" military aircraft, a weapon so potentially devastating and efficent that it makes even its cooly reserved Swedish developers glow with enthusiasm.

•

The Viggen jet—"A shining Swedish device" as one proud Swedish defense analyst called it—is to this country what the "Force de Frappe" is to France, and probably more. The pane, a double delta- winged, all purpose, short-take-off vehicle whose systems are controlled by sophisticated digital computers, is the most costly project ever attempted in Sweden outside the atomic energy program. It is to be the centrepiece of the country's already awesome defense effort in the 1970s.

•

But the key fact about the plane is really a political one: 89 per cent of the research, development and production work has been carried out by Swedish firms, with Swedish resources. In the view of the government and of the vast majority ot taxapyers, this fearsome weapon perfectly serves the country's policy of independence from military blocs and fits the Swedish view of itself as a "neutral porcupine," retiring but menacing.

Aside from symbolizing the achievement of the super-organized Swedish society, the plane also reflects the country's political and moral complexities.

For, among other things, the plane, produced by SAAB, seems likely to put peace-loving Sweden, which has not fought a war since 1814, into the big leagues of world armaments production. And with the economic demands and temptations expected to come from this may come as well some of the challenges to Swedish neutrality that the plane was built to prevent.

Centrepiece of Awesome Defence Effort in '70s

Sweden in World War II paid a humiliating price for its military weakness in concessions to the Germans. Today Swedish citizens uncomplainingly pay the highest per capita defense contribution ($125) dollars annually of any country except the Soviet Union and the United States. Every cent of its billion-dollar-a-year defense budget is squeezed for maximum effectiveness with McNamara cost techniques.

•

Visitors sometimes find something almost Orwellian—some say Bondian—about the contry's dual concern with peace and defense. Along the Baltic coast, Swedish naval vessels bristling with guided missiles lurk in hardened cave sites ready to pounce on intruders.

Dozens of defense plants and installations, such as the SAAB (Svenska Aeroplan Aktiebolaget) Viggen component workshop at Linkoeping, are located deep under many yards of solid rock.

Before the Magistrate

Roger Lindal, 31, of 5191 Rambler Road, pleaded not guilty Saturday to a charge of assaulting a police officer.

He told central court it was ten years since his last criminal charge. This was challenged by prosecutor John Macintyre who said Lindal was charged with a similar offence in 1965.

The case was remanded to July 25.

Paul Martin and James Walton, both of 314 Goldstream, pleaded guilty to a charge of forgery after they were apprehended Friday for trying to cash a cheque signed with two names not their own.

Walton signed the cheque for $148 in the name of Van-Isle Home Service Company, at the Toronto-Dominion Bank Fort and Douglas branch.

Detective John Perry, who made the arrests, said both men had been drinking but were not drunk.

They were remaneded for a presentence report.

Desmond Taylor, 59 San Jose, charged with breaking and entering and theft from Budget Rent-a-Car entered a plea of not guilty.

He elected trial by judge without jury, and a preliminary hearing was set for June 27. He made no application for bail.

Gordon G. Innes, 1011 Balmoral, pleaded not guilty to charges of impaired driving and failure to remain at the scene of an accident. He was remanded to June 27.

Fire Hazard Drops Sharply After Widely Spread Rain

By STEVE HUME

Rain and a mass of extremely moist air over most of the province brought relief to a 2,500-man army battling 324 forest fires at the weekend.

The British Columbia Forest Service reported the number of active blazes throughout the province is down to a total of 284 today, and the number of men on the actual fire line has been reduced to 1,400.

Spokesman Ray Wormald said rain has reduced over-all provincial fire-hazard ratings from extreme Saturday to low and moderate this morning.

"All fires are currently quiet, and mopping up operations are going ahead very quickly, with fire-fighters taking full advantage of the break in the weather to get new, more elaborate fireguards built."

He said the heavy overcast covering most of B.C. will not halt water-bombing operations by eight aircraft and a number of helicopters equipped with monsoon buckets.

A total of 65 bulldozers are also still engaged in support operations.

Meanwhile, the weather system that means sighs of relief for grimy, embattled fire-fighters promises glum days ahead for Victoria sun worshippers, the weather office reports.

Entire Province Under Cloud

Weatherman Alan McQuarrie said this morning a Pacific maritime cold front moving over the province means showers everywhere in B.C., but mostly in coastal regions.

All of the province is currently under cloud cover, he said, and Victorians can expect only partial clearing with continuing cool westerlies and low temperature in the mid 50s and low 60s during the next week.

He said that although most showers will be restricted to coastal regions, westerly winds will push moist, saturated air into interior and northern areas, which should retard any spread of current fires.

The moist air has helped so much in coastal areas that the Vancouver fire district, which includes Vancouver Island, has reported only 12 fires and a moderate hazard rating.

And that means sun-lovers are outnumbered 2 to 1 as loggers prepare to return to the woods with the possibility of the lifting of restrictions.

"It's quite likely certain restrictions will be lifted in Vancouver Island logging areas if cooler, wetter weather continues, the forest service spokesman said, but he would not speculate on the possibility of a government lift of Zone One regulations today.

In the meantime, rain varying from light to "lots of it" sent loggers back to work early today as operators awaited word from the B.C. forest service before opening regular schedules.

"GOOD HEAVENS", worries three-year-old Roberta Olmstead, 2622 Rose. After so many days of sunshine the feel of falling rain seemed almost a new experience for a little girl. But for many Victorians, weary of a long month of little moisture, it was a welcome sight. (Bill Halkett photo.)

TOO QUICK A RESPONSE TO PRAYERS

They prayed for rain at the Sunday morning service in St. John's Anglican Church—rain to quench the fires that are threatening B.C. forests.

The local response was immediate. It rained all afternoon and almost washed out the church's family picnic at Esquimalt Lagoon.

"But we carried on regardless," a member of the congregation said.

Water Crisis Evaporates As Concrete Pipe Arrives

By JIM HUME

Greater Victoria's potential water crisis was ended over the weekend with the first deliveries of 2,500 feet of concrete pipe from Portland, Oregon.

The pipe, purchased for $94,000, will be installed to link Sooke Lake with the Sooke tunnel.

Delivery of the pipe, plus the present wet weather, has eliminated the total ban on watering between the hours of 1 p.m. and 5 p.m.

As of today odd-numbered houses may water as much as they wish on odd-numbered dates, and even-numbered houses on even dates.

Original plans called for a steel pipe link to tap the vast water resources of Sooke Lake. But labor troubles in Australia delayed the freighter Cumulus, carrying the pipe from the Antipodes to the west coast. At the last count the vessel was 18 days behind schedule.

Mayor Hugh Stephen, Chairman of the Greater Victoria District Water Board, said this morning the lake-tunnel link had to be in operation by July 20 if a serious water crisis was to be averted.

The earliest the steel pipe could be operational was July 25, and that, only if everything went smoothly.

IN TROUBLE

"Not that we would have run out of water," Stephen said. "But without the lake-tunnel link we would have trouble maintaining supplies in the city after July 25. Had the dry weather continued there is little doubt that by July 20 all garden and lawn watering would have to be totally banned with the only use permitted that for toilets and washing."

With delivery of the concrete pipe to replace the steel pipe on route from Australia Stephen said the area's water problem would be ended for many years to come.

The concrete pipe will be a permanent installation and will be operational on or before July 15, five days before the deadline.

Stephen said original plans called for 2,600 feet of steel pipe costing $116,000. The new plan calls for 2,500 feet of concrete pipe for the most vital link and 1,000 feet of steel pipe to be installed after the freighter eventually reaches Vancouver. Total cost is expected to be $127,000.

Stephen noted that the steel pipe ordered and due for delivery in late July would not be wasted.

"The steel pipe ordered from the Victoria Machinery Depot will be held in stock for approximately 18 months and then used as the first stage of the pipeline which will eventually serve the Saanich peninsula," he said, "So we are not wasting any money, just, in effect, buying the first pipeline stage well ahead of time."

'Frustration Knocks Out Brightest'

A former University of British Columbia professor said today some of the best university students are dropping out because of frustration either from the way the universities are run, what they teach or how they teach it.

Dr. Norman MacKenzie, also a former Canadian Senator, made his comment at the beginning of a two-day University of Victoria symposium on the role of the university in contemporary society.

•

"Why is it that some of our brightest people don't find in the universities what they want to do, and end up by dropping out in frustration?

"Among those who fail only five per cent do not have the intellectual capabilities to work in an academic environment."

Dr. MacKenzie pointed out that 33 per cent qualify for university education, but the actual number of people who manage to get one is far lower.

He spoke from the floor during a question period following a speech by labor relations expert Dr. Eugene Forsey, a Carleton University professor.

Dr. Forsey said many students come unprepared for university work, and blamed the public school system.

He cited the example of students who are unable to write well:

•

"It's outrageous that people like this should be let loose upon the universities."

Dr. Forsey said while professors and graduates of universities may bring about social, political and economic change, the institution itself is not an instrument of change.

"It is the function of the universities to provide professional training, but it should also be their function to provide professional education.

"And in this respect they appear to me somewhat deficient—for one thing, they let in too many people who are incapable, or ill prepared, or both.

"But against these difficulties every university should exercise unceasing vigilance, practise unceasing self-criticism, wage unceasing war."

•

In answer to a question from Vancouver Sun publisher Stuart Keate, Dr. Forsey said McGill University lecturer Stanley Gray should not have received a Canada Council grant for political science studies.

Gray was fired by McGill earlier this year for leading student demonstrations on the Montreal campus, and his grant came under fire from members of Parliament.

Bryant Insists Secret Sessions Will Continue

By SUSAN RILEY

Esquimalt council will continue to hold closed committee meetings, Mayor Ray Bryant said today.

At closed committee of the whole meeting, council tried to restrict discussion to "proper matters" but "sometimes a counsellor may bring up something he forgot to mention" at the open council meeting.

Mr. Bryant said this was an exception.

"Proper matters" for secret discussion, according to Bryant and the Municipal Act include land aquisition, and staff and personnel matters.

He said council also deals with many matters involving the provincial and federal governments which they request be kept confidential.

MORE THAN SAANICH

Esquimalt holds more secret meetings than Saanich, for example, because the municipality deals with the defence department more than any other municipality, he said.

About 25 per cent of the municipality's population work for the department.

Tonight council will hold no closed committee of the whole meeting.

Except for one April meeting the semi-monthly council meetings have been followed by secret sessions since October.

"It is strictly a co-incidence that we are not having a committee of the whole meeting tonight," said Bryant. He said there was nothing to discuss which merited a committee of the whole meeting.

NOT AUTOMATIC

He said Esquimalt was not like Oak Bay which, until last week, automatically made all committee of the whole meetings secret.

"Esquimalt council always passes a motion in advance before resolving itself into a committee of the whole, "and the press have been asked to leave and they normally do."

He said discussions of assessments, which Oak Bay kept secret, should be held in open council.

TAKES LONGER

He said closed committee meetings in Esquimalt often last longer than open council meetings which precede them because aldermen are more relaxed when they don't have an audience.

"When things are informal, discussion aften takes longer."

Esquimalt's A committee meetings, dealing with fire, finance and zoning are open to the press Bryant said, except for certain matters which must be excluded in the public interest.

"I don't see that our situation in Esquimalt is any different from that in Saanich," said Bryant. In Saanich council goes into secret session for land acquisition and personnel discussions.

He said he hopes the press and council don't "declare war on each other" over the matter of secrecy and public interest.

CAR TEST EXTENSION RULED OUT

There will be no extension of the July 1 deadline for the testing of all motor vehicles in Victoria at the provincial testing station.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson announced today the July 1 deadline would remain in effect.

Up to the end of May 67,279 of an extimated 80,000 vehicles registered in the Greater Victoria area have been approved at the testing station.

"This is a relatively high percentage," said Peterson.

"The station has not been too busy lately," he added.

A spokesman for the attorney-general's office said no regulations specifying exactly what will happen to drivers caught on the road without a provincial sticker after July 1 have yet been sent to Victoria police.

"We're looking on the positive rather than the negative side," the spokesman said.

WARMING UP for his Shrine Circus act, Benny Cristiani is forced into Memorial Arena corridor while men set up three rings and lion cages on the arena floor for shows today at 4 p.m. and 8 p.m. Handstand is executed under the watchful eye of aerialist Petrova Luvas. There will be two more performances of the circus Tuesday.

HOSPITAL VOTE BY YEAR'S END

Greater Victoria ratepayers will be asked before the end of 1969 to decide whether to spend an estimated $20 million to $30 million on acute care hospital beds in this area.

The total amount of the expenditure was discussed this morning by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark and the advisory committee to the Capital Region Hospital District Planning Board.

Neither Loffmark nor committee chairman Dr. A. C. Pickles, would comment on the total amount after their hour-long meeting.

★

"It will be a whopper," said Dr. Pickles.

Loffmark said he has heard estimates ranging from $20 million to $30 million.

"I don't want to guess, however," he said. "I don't want in any way to inhibit the advisory committee's planning."

Pickles and Loffmark agreed that the roles of the province and regional boards were clearer after the meeting.

Loffmark said the only condition laid down to the advisory committee was that at least 75 acute care beds for Saanich must be included in the new referendum.

The acute care beds along with 75 extended care beds already approved, will be located in a new hospital to be built north of Elk Lake.

★

"All recommendations on extended care beds have been accepted in principle," he said.

"There is a hold-up on siting in two cases, but this should be cleared up very shortly."

Loffmark said there was agreement that the new referendum should be in general terms with specific allocations left up to the committee.

Band Tuning Up for Expo '70

The Canadian image in Japan is lumber, coal, minerals and other raw materials — not people, says Peter Boldt, principal of Oak Bay Junior Secondary School.

He's confident that the situation will change when the Oak Bay school band visits Osaka July 6 to 20 in 1970 as Greater Victoria representatives at Expo '70.

"These young people — 85 will be going, most of them Oak Bay Senior Secondary School and some from Boldt's — will represent our nation well. They're not only fine performers and scholars, they're the type of youngsters that will put Canada on the map as people."

Boldt is one of the adults who will accompany the band on its two-week stay in Japan.

Boldt said today he is confident the $35,000 needed to finance the trip will be found.

He praised the Oak Bay Kiwanis Club who have organized a July 1 walkathon to raise funds.

The Kiwanis project chairman, Jack McNeill, says his club hopes to raise $10,000 from the walkathon which will start at 10 a.m. at the park with Mayor Fred Hawes firing the starting gun.

The 10-mile walkathon will be around the borders of Oak Bay with check points set up at one-mile intervals and refreshments provided at the half-way mark.

Boldt says the band members are already getting down to the business of raising the extra $25,000.

"We have high hopes of getting good support, especially from the companies who export to Japan. This is a good opportunity for them to help sell Canada in a personal way."

Each band member will be asked to contribute $200 toward the costs and also work on money-raising projects.

"The projects," he said, "will probably include car-washes. We're also talking about a raffle on, perhaps, a building lot."

He also gave credit to the schools' band director, David Dunnet.

"He has worked endlessly to get this project off the ground. He's written innumerable letters to provincial, federal and Japanese officials."

The band will play at both the Canadian and British Columbian pavilions in Osaka and give up to six performances daily in the exposition's main amphitheatre.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Candle Confusion Solved by Husband

By PENNY SAVER

"I felt so foolish, Penny," Gladys said as she began to relate the tale of the candles that wouldn't. "There I was in the store, trying to find some nice candles to go in the new candle holders my sister-in-law bought me. My mind was totally blank, I just couldn't remember what size to buy.

"Finally I took a wild guess and bought some of those skinny candles. I took them home, set up the candle holders and — you guessed it — they were too small. The store was closed and I wanted to use them that night, so I got some thread and began to wrap.

"I wrapped, and wrapped and wrapped til my fingers were sore and my husband came home. Naturally he wanted to know why dinner wasn't ready but when I told him and showed him the mess, he began to laugh. "Silly Gladys," he said. "Look—" and turned the candle holder upside down. Lo and behold, there was another holder just the right size for my little candles!"

Gladys' candle holders really are a good idea, and very attractive as well. Made of Danish silver they are very small—perhaps three inches high and as many inches across. The base, when the big candle holder is up, is a rounded square that curves down to the table. When the candle holder is inverted, this square curves up, making a graceful drip catcher.

I poked around and found where Gladys' sister-in-law found these holders. A pair cost $6.50 and they make wonderful gifts.

Also from the same company are combination candle holders and bud vases. The base of each is shaped like a clover leaf without a stem and from this rises three thin petal-like prongs. Between these is a thin glass vial with fluting at the top. This holds the water and the flowers. When this glass vial is removed a candle can be slipped between the prongs. In silver these candle-holders cum vases are $6.50 a pair. They are available in brass as well for $4.95 a pair.

Remember the double pot holders I talked about a while ago? These had two pockets for the hands joined by a band of cloth. When I first saw these they only came in white with a pattern of mushrooms. The other day I saw the same kind of mitts in solid colors with a white trim. There was a blue, a much darker and more vibrant blue and a deep, vibrant red. These double mitts are $2 each.

The flowers that bloom in the spring are just fine, but the flowers that bloom all year round—namely, plastic one—are free from nose-destroying pollen. Plastic flowers are becoming more and more realistic. Just the other day I was completely fooled by some potted cyclamens made in France. Each pot full of flowers contains 6 blossoms and a wealth of very realistic looking leaves, along with a green bow, and costs $2.49. These come in purple (the most real looking color) white, and red.

The same company makes pots of plastic begonias for the same price. These come in red and orange shade. Each pot full has two blooms and many leaves.

Please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. for information on this column.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Pen Pal Is Trouble

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBEY: George (made up name) and I have been married for 27 years. We have six children. Two are married and we have grandchildren, too. Abby, I really love this man with all my heart.

Recently an old girl friend of George's found his name in a telephone directory and she wrote him a letter asking him to reply. Well, he called her up, long distance, and they talked for 20 minutes.

George told her he was happily married and had six children. She told George she had married an alcoholic, who deserted her four years ago.

Well, I thought that was that, but in a couple of days here comes a letter from this woman. She told my husband her whole life history since they had last seen each other, which was 30 years ago, and she closed saying, "Let's keep in touch."

Now, Abby, I can't see any good in his keeping in touch with her, can you? George says there is no harm in reviving an old friendship, but I know they were more than friends.

Don't you think George is just looking for trouble? Please put your answer in the paper as he reads you faithfully and respects your advice.
George's Wife

DEAR WIFE: George is not looking for trouble—he's looking for excitement. But trouble is probably what he will find. Tell him you love him, you're jealous, and if he "keeps in touch" with this old flame from 30 years back, he'll break your heart.

DEAR ABBY: No offense intended! I am one of your greatest fans. However, this letter is prompted by the one you received and answered about singers and musicians at weddings not being part of the wedding party.

Come on, Abby, I have played piano and organ at weddings for several years and have always been included in the wedding party. To leave out the musicians in my book is bad taste, especially if these services are performed at no cost to the couple. I have never charged for my services and I am a professional. I consider it a personal favor for those getting married. Yours, sincerely, John Brown.

DEAR JOHN: When I answered that letter, I had in mind only musicians and vocalists who were paid to perform a service, not those who did it as a favor to the couple. So I'll take 20 lashes with a vocal cord and a swat on the derriere with an old swell pedal.

DEAR ABBY: I have just started to date, and I have a problem which is common to most girls my age. It seems that every time I go out with a boy, if I let him kiss me on the first date I never see him again. But then if I don't let him kiss me, I never see him again, either. So how is a girl supposed to know what do do?
Just Wondering

DEAR JUST: She can assume that whether she kisses a boy or not on the first date has nothing to do with whether she ever sees him again. And go to work on other possible causes for being a one-date-dolly.

CONFIDENTIAL TO LITTLE BOW PEEP: Better tell him to buy three rings. An engagement ring, a wedding ring, and a teething ring. Lotsa luck.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

SEW SIMPLE

Press Cloth Still Best for Coats

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I don't understand why some pressing is done with a steam iron and other pressing must be done with a press cloth. I don't know too much about sewing and am thoroughly confused about this. Mrs. B. E. R.:

Dear Mrs. B. E. T.:

A steam iron can be used for basically all of your sewing when your garment is in production. Be sure to remember one very important fact, don't ever, ever press any part of your garment from the right side.

The purpose of a press cloth is for pressing the faced edges of coats and suits and it is used when pressing wool more than any other type of fabric. This is important because you need more heat and moisture to get a sharp look on the edges of a woollen garment. Dampen an area of your press cloth lightly, use a hot iron (not steam) and press with a little more pressure than normal. I usually prefer pressing any faced area twice, rather than getting it too moist the first time. Wool takes a long time to actually dry again and when it dries naturally, the sharpness of the pressed edges become rounded again. For this reason, you must pound the faced edges firmly after you remove the pressing cloth, with the lower, unpadded end of your pressing board.

Candy Box Frills At Wimbledon

By NADEANE WALKER

LONDON (AP) — Many of the girls playing at Wimbledon will show just a fraction less leg on the tennis courts this year, but they'll be candy box pretty in frilly ballerina-like clothes with flashes of color.

Teddy Tinling, who designs for more than half the contestants, took the wraps off his new creations at a showing with players as models. He says the designs were inspired by the new crop of pretty young American players.

PIGEONS ON HEM

The sensation of the day was 18-year-old Kristy Pigeon of Danville, Calif., in a lavender satin dress with six fully feathered pigeons spaced around the hem.

She can't wear it on the court at Wimbledon, where only white with colored trimmings is tolerated, but she said, "I'll take the pigeons off and wear the dress for matches in America."

Two of the American girls, Julie Heldman of New York City and Peaches Bartkowicz, Hamtramck, Mich., sported hippy Star Spangled Banner dresses, with skirts lined with red and white flag stripes and trimmed at the hem with stars on a blue ribbon. Headbands of star-printed blue ribbons completed the outfits, and Julie said they'll wear them at Wimbledon, minus the headbands.

Wimbledon play starts Monday.

Carole Kalogeropoules, the former Carole Prosen of Orlando, Fla., who played for the United States four years but is representing Greece this year—her husband is Greek—was another knockout in a pale blue "maxi" dress down to her knees, with blue tights and ankle boots with blue laces. She said she may wear tights for her matches, though she supposes they will have to be white ones.

The outspoken Tinling, who is battling both for longer skirts and color at Wimbledon, says he told the girls that too short skirts are "just plain damned ugly."

BREVITY SUITS HER

The designer, an ex-Wimbledon player himself, resigned the position he had held for 23 years as master of ceremonies in the centre court when the frilly pants he designed for Gussie Moran kicked up a rumpus in 1949.

The shortest skirt—there's just 11 inches of it—will be worn by Graciella Moran of Argentina because she's one of the smallest players. Tingling conceded that brevity suits her figure.

Job's Daughters Installation

The International Order of Job's Daughters, Bethel No. 36, of Langford, held its installation of officers recently at Our Lady of the Rosary Church Hall. Sharon Emery, centre, was installed as honored queen. With her are her two princesses, Jeanne Rolston, left, senior princess, and Heather Forbes, junior princess. (Chevron Studio.)

They Don't Speak The Same Language

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — She says: "My husband doesn't understand me." He says, "I try, but we don't speak the same language."

And they don't. There are "man" words and "woman" words. But their differences need not cause serious family friction. Just understand there are differences and go on loving.

For instance, he says, "I'm going to buy a house," She says, "we're looking for a home." He refers to the "dishes." She says "china." He says "sheets and pillow cases" she says "linens." He says "we'll get a green range for the kitchen." She says, "we'll do the whole kitchen in avocado." He buys "pants" for himself. She takes his "trousers" to the cleaners.

There is a whole parallel stream of male and female words, says lexicographer Stuart Berg Flexner. "Women speak a different language especially in the world of colors—cosmetics, home furnishings, fashion," he says.

A man doesn't use feminine words like "mauve" or "fuchsia" to describe a color and he doesn't tell a girl she's wearing a "darling" dress. He says, "That's a pretty orange dress you have." She says, "It's tangerine."

And, according to Flexner, even when a man and woman speak the same words, the image they create often differs.

He mentions roast beef and immediately thinks of the hearty dinner to be enjoyed. She thinks of the high price of meat and the extra trouble in the kitchen.

She says, "Let's go to the movies tonight" and is remembering they used to neck at the drive-in. He thinks, "That means eating out, too, and $10 more for each of us."

When Skin Sags
on Face and Neck

Even skin that sags and is no longer smooth, could be made firm and much younger looking. That "older look" usually appears first around the throat, but is comparatively easy to treat by very simple means that require no skill at all.

Get 2nd Debut with CEF 600 or CEF 1200 in double strength from your drug or dept. store and apply it gently to your throat and face each night before retiring. After just a few days, you will notice your skin becoming firmer again and smoother. That is because the 2nd Debut has revitalized your skin with a new supply of water from the surface clear into the inner skin.

Evening Pants Back Again This Fall

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

NEW YORK — The New York Couture Group opened its fall fashion showings Thursday for the inspection of the nation's fashion press, and it was immediately apparent that the mood was much quieter than in recent seasons.

While none of the houses showing the first day has ever been known for a wild streak, it seemed as if the Group had chosen designers of the classic persuasion to lead off Press Week. Jo Copeland for Patullo came first, making a firm commitment to dresses in her well-known detailed manner and beautiful fabrics. Miss Copeland likes some of the new colors, such as yellow, orange and a bright mauve, and she makes a bow to the casual with some very pretty versions of the shirt-dress. One is in bright mauve jersey with gold buttons all down the front, while another, in kelly wool, has a split band collar, a small placket set with buttons and a back belt buttoned at the sides.

SILHOUETTES FLAIR

In silhouettes Miss Copeland sticks with a flared A-line, varied with an occasional dirndl, such as a black matte jersey with bishop sleeves, the hipline swathed in emerald and fuschia gypsy scarves with jeweled tie ends. Pretty details include a silvered midriff inset on a black velvet dirndl, a black and yellow stole for a black dress with a flared hem, and pearls used in chains across the front of cocktail dresses, both white and black.

Miss Copeland's use of all the current silhouettes led easily into Bob Bugnand's evening clothes for Sam Friendlander. There's something for every taste, from simple jerseys, scarved and hooded for the woman who prefers no fuss to her evening clothes, to full-skirted velvets sashed in satin, with jersey bodices. There is lots of glitter, plunged necklines, sleeves from the long and slim to full billows of Indian silk shot with gold.

EVENING PANTS

If there is any one tendency in evening dress, it's pants outfits, mostly because they can't help standing out amidst all the different kinds of dresses. Mr. Bugnand likes his done as cuff-collared tunics over straight-cut or culotte pants, with glitter braid trims and occasional dollops of glamour such as silver net sleeves.

B. H. Wragge, of course, has always been one of the apostles of fashion calm. The Wragge look of pleated skirts and casual tops is now augmented by the popular vest look for fall. In checks and plaids, banded with solid colors, the separates are accented with the equally popular long scarf, often self-fringed. Pine green and a deeply glowing blue are among the favored fall colors.

Nat Kaplan also likes the vest, but their clothes are a little more formal, as if the Wragge young woman had graduated to a more sophisticated version of the current mode. Although solids and patterns are combined, they have a city look, as in a beige and navy cheek used for a long jacket over a navy A-line dress. A matching scarf swings around the neck. The same jacket can be used for pants or a skirt as well.

Satin appears for daytime in many shirts to be worn with the pants and skirts, usually with an ascot neckline. Cuffs are now deeper, barrel style and edged with tiny buttons. The shirts are in beige, pink or yellow, depending on the costume they belong with.

Oddly enough, the news of the day came from one of the most conservative houses, Davidow. While the rest of the fashion world seems to be quieting down, Davidow has decided to liven up. Not that they've abandoned any of the quality for which their suits have always been famed. They're simply made them part of a total look which now includes coats and dresses. A green and white chevron-striped coat with a green leather belt and back-pleat flare goes over a precisely curved green dress. A red and grey plaid in a double-breasted shaped coat is paired with a grey A-line dress with a plastron front.

BOLDER COLORS

Davidow is using bolder colors and patterns, such as a big plaid in yellow, red and black and a rope tweed in brown, coral, red and white. There's more detailing, such as a slotted belt on a side welt seam, used on both the jacket and dress of a costume, a curved-top pocket and stoles. There are even three pants suits and a fit-and-flare coat with a fluffy lynx collar. It all adds up to a more current look for the dedicated Davidow customer and her younger sister.

The day's final collection offered a somewhat more dramatic atmosphere, but it was in the tradition of courture, not of mad modernism. William Travilla has a distinguished record designing for films, and he knows how to use a bold touch with taste.

Whole grapes and slices of orange are used as garnish for this French version of fried chicken. Dry white wine and orange juice add interesting flavor to the gravy.

Chicken in Wine Sauce

French people have an irresistible way with chicken which is well demonstrated in this recipe for Chicken Veronique, tender pieces of chicken in a wine and grape sauce. The whole grapes and orange slices make it ideal for party entertaining.

It is easy to prepare, requires little cooking time and can be prepared in advance and reheated just before serving. Try it with fluffy mashed potatoes to sop up the sauce

This recipe was created and tested by Mrs. Claire Friefeld, home economist.

CHICKEN VERNONIQUE

Two tbsp. flour, ½ tsp. salt; ½ tsp. black pepper; 1 (3 to 4 lb.) broiler-fryer, cut in serving pieces; ¼ cup peanut oil; ½ cup dry white wine; ⅓ cup orange juice; 1 tbsp. chopped parsley; 2 tbsp. slivered orange peel; 1 cup halved seedless white grapes.

Combine flour, salt and ¼ tsp. pepper; use to lightly dust chicken pieces.

In large skillet brown chicken in peanut oil; salt lightly. Add wine, orange juice, parsley and remaining ¼ tsp. pepper. Cover; simmer over low heat 30 minutes. Stir occasionally. Add orange peel and continue cooking until tender about 10 to 15 minutes.

Remove chicken to serving platter. Add grapes to gravy and cook, stirring constantly, 2 minutes. Pour over chicken. Garnish with grapes and orange slices. Makes 5 servings.

CWL Seeks To Raise Exemptions

The Provincial Council of the Catholic Women's League, meeting at Trail for the 22nd annual convention, passed a resolution recommending to the Federal and Provincial Governments the appointment of a full-time independent housing minister.

Other resolutions asked that representation be made to the government of Canada that the basic exemption on present income taxes be raised to $1,500 per adult, and $500 per dependent child; that members of the CWL urge the Hon. Ralph Loffmark to include dental coverage under the B.C. medical plan; and that the CWL "do all in our power to fight pollution in our environment."

Mrs. W. W. Rogers of Victoria was re-elected first vice-president of the council. President is Mrs. J. B. Macdonald of Trail.

Bitten Nails Grow Faster

NEW YORK — Nature actually encourages nail-biting!

A recent study reveals that the fingernails of nail-biters grow 20 per cent faster than the fingernails of non-nail biters, thus providing nail-biters with constantly replenished temptation.

The child with long fingers is most tempted. Other studies show that the longer your fingers, the speedier your nails grow. Like everything else, nail growth slows down as you get older.

If you don't bite your nails, it takes about six months for them to reach their full growth.

Odd Diet Eases Ulcers

BRISTOL, Eng. — After a friend suggested facetiously that the traditional strict diet for duodenal ulcers might be no more effective than a diet of pancakes and shaving cream, the doctor decided to give the idea a whirl.

He put 30 of his ulcer patients on the pancake and shaving cream diet and, sure enough, found that they all felt better. X-rays confirmed the improvement.

Drawing on such evidence, a British internist, Dr. R. H. Salter, has made a heretical suggestion—most permanent strict diets for intestinal and stomach disorders are not necessary.

Dr. Salter believes diets may be used temporarily for the relief of specific symptoms but that most long-term diets are "unpleasant, expensive, difficult to adhere to, tedious to prepare (and) notably lacking in scientific evidence of efficacy." Patients often demand diets, leading to "food fads (of) often absurd proportions."

Ulcer patients afraid of fried foods have absorbed comparable amounts of disguised fats without ill effect, Dr. Salter notes. He recommends normal rather than low-fat diets for symptom-free liver patients and questions low-residue diets for the treatment of ulcerative colitis or diverticular disease of the colon. These diets neither cure nor prevent relapses, he says.

Royal Investiture Has Fairyland Aura

By KARL E. MEYER

LONDON (WP) — The British people — can one blame them? — are poised for an escape into fairyland as a pleasant young man named Charles Windsor is formally invested as Prince of Wales, the most glittering of his string of titles, which also include Earl of Chester, Duke of Cornwall, Duke of Rothesay, Earl of Carrick, Baron of Renfrew, Lord of the Isles and Great Steward of Scotland.

The investiture takes place July 1 at Caernarvon Castle in North Wales. By sober calculation, some 500 million people will be watching the ceremony on world television, and nowhere will ratings be higher than in Britain.

CURIOSITY ANTICIPATED

Not since the coronation of Queen Elizabeth in 1953 has interest in the monarchy been so intense on these islands.

Newsstands are festooned with souvenir brochures about the investiture — the first since 1911 — and nearly every magazine has an article about their heir presumptive.

The queen has anticipated this insatiable curiosity. She authorized a 105-minute TV documentary called simply "The Royal Family."

Her majesty even discloses an unsuspected sense of humor, describing at one point how she was presented to a gorilla.

CALCULATED GAMBLE

This show, broadcast on Saturday, will be followed by another, equally unprecedented, in which the Prince of Wales will be interviewed on the eve of his investiture.

The exposure constitutes a calculated gamble. Speaking of royalty, Walter Bagehot once warned: "It's mystery is its life. We must not let daylight in on magic."

But the daylight is filtering in, and so far it has not diminished the magic.

On the contrary, for television — a British invention — seems made for the monarchy, and vice versa.

The first queen to be crowned before the cameras has learned to use the medium that appears destined to perpetuate fairyland for generations to come, indeed until the time when King Farouk's famous prophecy may come true — when the only kings left are the kings of England, hearts, spades, diamonds and clubs.

Fairyland has had its ups and downs. Once it was as fashionable to revile the sovereign as it is now unthinkable to do so. When George IV died in 1830, the habitually decorous London Times said on the day of his funeral:

"There never was an individual less regretted by his fellow creatures than this deceased king. What eye has wept for him? What heart has heaved one sob of unmercenary sorrow? . . . If George IV ever had a friend — a devoted friend in any rank of life, — we protest that the name of him or her has never reached us."

Nor was Queen Victoria uniformly beloved during her long reign. It is commonly forgotten that the British republican movement reached its zenith in the years 1865-1871, when there was widespread criticism of the queen's total retirement from her public duties during her prolonged mourning for Prince Albert (who had died in 1861).

CHILD-REARING PROBLEM

The almost religious veneration of the throne begins in the later years of Victoria's reign, after Disraeli had lured her from retirement and when she presided like a benevolent matriarch over the age whose values she embodied.

So potent had the royal magic become—especially after the queen's diamond jubilee in 1897—that it enveloped her son Edward VII, once a scapegrace but, as king, the image of everybody's favorite uncle.

The rearing of royalty has long posed almost insoluble dilemmas. How can any crown prince have a normal boyhood when he grows up among genuflections and knows—no matter how badly he misbehaves—that he will become king? The history of the royal nurseries is a chronicle of disasters.

The life-loving Edward VII was subjected to grimly humorless private tutors, at Oxford was not permitted to sleep in his college with other students, and was not allowed to see state papers until he was well into middle age.

A different approach has been taken with Prince Charles. He attended Gordonstoun, a preparatory school founded in 1934 by a refugee from Nazi Germany, and is now at Cambridge, leading a more normal student life than any previous prince of Wales.

His parents have gone to extreme lengths to protect him from the sometimes frenzied curiosity of the press—Prince Philip's most celebrated rows with photographers have arisen from their intrusions on the privacy of the children.

Only this year has the royal heir begun to speak for himself in public, first in a highly successful radio interview and now on television. The British are happily discovering that he has something of his father's wit as well as being the kind of all-rounder his subjects admire—a sailor, pilot, cello-player, actor and student of archaeology.

Spirited Campaign Nears End As Socreds Decide Tonight

By ED GOULD

DUNCAN — Cowichan-Malahat Socreds will nominate a candidate tonight at the Royal Canadian Legion Hall for the next provincial election.

Candidates are Pat Rogers and Dr. Charles Ennals who have been conducting spirited campaigns.

Ennals, 32, has been involved at the executive level of the party since 1960. He was defeated in Oak Bay riding in 1963 and 1966.

He practised medicine there after graduation from UBC in 1962.

Rogers, 31, is circulation manager for Victoria Press Ltd. Former recreation commission chairman, he ran against Robert Strachan in the last provincial election. Strachan, former NDP leader, retained the seat which he has held for 17 years.

Ennals was born in Duncan and graduated from high school in 1955 with two best citizen awards and a Rotary scholarship.

He has spoken of his "rapport" with the Social Credit government and intimated that a vote for him will mean the interested ear of the premier.

Rogers tends to identify more closely with the blue rather than the white collar although he claims support from professional and business men too.

INSIDER?

He was maintained a constant campaign despite discreet indications within the party that Ennals has the inside track and the outcome is a foregone conclusion.

Indication of his chances from the working segment of this union-strong territory was his showing against Strachan in 1966 when he took 41.84 of the popular vote. This including winning places like Youbou, a logging community, which had never gone Socred before.

He feels he would stand an even better chance the second time against Strachan who, despite occasional rumors about his imminent retirement, is still in the race.

MILL MAN WINS

Trustee Vote Draws 139

NORTH COWICHAN—David Roy Hayward won the last vacant seat on the Cowichan School Board Saturday as only 139 of an eligible 3,758 voters turned out.

An employment superintendent at Crofton Pulp and Paper Limited, Hayward won 78 votes to defeat his only rival, stockbroker Frederick Zantvoort.

The byelection was called after Jack Efford resigned following the failure of a school budget bylaw March 29 and a feeling that "things can only get worse."

Chairman Bruce Devitt said he was disappointed at the turnout considering the time and effort trustees put into the budget.

"People are not really concerned about it," he said.

The other vacancy now filled was created when Alastair Macdonald also resigned because he felt a lack of public confidence in the board was expressed by defeat of the budget bylaw.

The seat was filled when marina owner Kurt Horn agreed with Hayward and Vantvoort to fill out Macdonald's term which expires in December and not run for the longer term that Efford still had to complete.

Star Of Opening In Drydock

POWELL RIVER — Highways Minister Wesley Black and Minister Without Portfolio Isabel Dawson were on hand today for the inaugural ferry run between Powell River and Blubber Bay on Texada Island.

The star of the show wasn't.

The $900,000 Texada Queen, newest addition to the B.C. government ferry fleet, was to have made the initial run. Instead, her place was taken by the Comox Queen, which normally makes the run between Comox and Powell River.

Department of highway officials said it will probably be two weeks before the Texada Queen is ready for duty. Being built by Allied Shipbuilding Ltd. in North Vancouver, she will carry 30 cars and 150 passengers.

The Queen of the Islands will be handling the summer run between Comox and Powell River.

Hard Trip Expected By Low Income Group

With one car, one tent and almost no money, two men and two women, members of the Victoria Low Income Group, plant to leave Victoria for Ottawa Tuesday.

Their purpose is to carry a petition to Welfare Minister John Munro protesting the treatment of welfare clients in this province.

"This will be a hard trip but we'll make it," said group president Walter Olszewski. "We have one tent and the women will sleep inside and the men outside."

Although the travellers failed to raise any money towards the journey here in Victoria they hope for donations from interested Canadians in towns along the route.

Representing the old-aged pensioners will be Mr. and Mrs. Byron Johnson, while Cathy Ware, 542 Rithet, a welfare mother; and Olszewsik, 4057 Gordon Head will make up the rest of the group.

They plan to travel through Cranbrook, Trail, Lethbridge, Medicine Hat, Regina, Winnipeg, Fort William, Sudbury, Toronto, and Ottawa.

Olszewski explained that the petitioners expect to be a week or even more on the road.

Farmer Honored By Islanders

MAYNE ISLAND — Walter Hunt Sowrey was made honorary president of Mayne Island Agricultural Society and Fall Fair Saturday and also received a life membership in the society.

Almost 150 guests attended a testimonial dinner for Sowrey and his wife Kitty. Head table guests included chairmen of various island organizations and their wives.

There were also places for guests from off the island.

A scrapbook containing letters from heads of government and islanders was prepared by teacher David Bradley.

Fred Dodds was MC and messages were read from Prime Minister Trudeau, Premier Bennett, former lieutenant-governor George Pearkes, John Tisdalle, MLA, and NDP leader Tommy Douglas, MP for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands.

Foley Ups Target For Record Jumps

DUNCAN — Roger Foley, 34, of Victoria, will attempt a world parachute record of 158 jumps at Duncan Airport Sunday.

He had originally planned to go for 125 jumps, but was forced up to 158 Saturday when two Canadian skydivers made 150 jumps each from 2,200 feet at Abbotsford to establish a joint world record.

They are Bill Hardman, 25, a parachute instructor and manager of Abbotsford Sport Parachute Centre, and John McGoldrick, 21, heavy equipment operator from Kamloops.

The previous record for most jumps in a day was 112 set by John Corteau of New York. Last year he cracked the 100 mark set by Hardman two years ago as a 1967 centennial project.

Roger Foley, a jump instructor, says he will go all out to break the record. He has been jumping for four years and says age in no barrier to parachuting.

Ke keeps in shape by running and doing daily calisthenics.

Foley will jump from his own Cessna 180 at the legal minimum of 2,200 feet.

His three alternating pilots will be Bruce Gorle and Norman Bennett of Mill Bay and Joseph Howse, president of Duncan Flying Club.

He Had Choice: Wife or Dog

COBLE HILL — The church dispute over the Good Shepherd animal shelter here has died down. But the noise of the animals in the shelter remains deafening.

Mother Cecelia, 79, and five Sisters of the Love of Jesus have more than 150 dogs on 15 acres here plus cats, horses and goats.

Many of the animals were neglected or treated cruelly by former owners. Some will stay at the home, others are housed here until selected by new owners.

The row blew up in April, 1965, when the Roman Catholic Church ordered the shelter closed. Mother Cecelia kept it open and eventually the stormy conflict slipped out of the headlines.

Among the five sisters operating the shelter is Sister Mary Julia, a ruddy-cheeked num from Iowa, who can give the name of every animal as she makes the rounds with visitors.

The animals inelude two aged horses, one with a spinal ailment. The other is being coaxed into eating regular meals, something new to the horse after 20 years.

The dogs include a Pyrenees dog whose owner had him shipped from England as a surprise present for his wife. The bill for dog and shipping was $2,000.

It was indeed a surprise: The dog's as large as a pony. Explaining why it's here, Sister Julia remarked: "His owner had to decide whether he was to lose his wife or his dog."

NANAIMO MAN DROWNS; BOAT HITS DEADHEAD

CAMPBELL RIVER—Emil Zemlak, 26, of Nanaimo, drowned Saturday in Lower Campbell Lake, 14 miles west of Campbell River.

He and 22-year-old Bing Sudlow, of Campbell River, were fishing in a small plywood boat, powered by an outboard, when the craft struck a deadhead and sank.

The impact threw Zemlak, a non-swimmer, into 30 to 35 feet of water. Ludlow tried vainly to save him. The drowning occurred about 3:50 p.m.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Association

Oswald: "Here's a hand to wind up our discussion of luck in duplicate. It came up in a match between a New York and a Boston team back in 1935. The bidding in the box was that of the Boston North-South pair."

Jim: "I can see what happened to South. He won the second spade, took a club finesse since he was in his own hand. for the first and last time, watched East take the queen of clubs and four spade tricks for down one."

Oswald: "When New York held the North-South cards they were playing a convention known as 'Aces over two bids.' South respondend two spades, North tried three hearts and South raised to four hearts."

Jim: "Wasn't that bid supposed to show the king of hearts?"

Oswald: "It was or at least North thought so. He jumped to six no-trump. East led the four of spades and North had to scramble for 12 tricks."

Jim: "Not a very encouraging prospect but it looks as if North managed to take all 13."

Oswald: "That he did. He saw just one slim chance to make six and took it. He won the spade lead with the ace and at trick two he finessed the jack of hearts. Then he played his ace and king of clubs and dropped East's queen. Now he had a second entry to dummy for another heart finesse but he wasn't satisfied. He cashed his ace, king and queen of diamonds. The suit broke 3-3 so that after entering dummy with the 10 of clubs he took the last diamond to discard his last spade. It was no trouble to finesse hearts again and take all the tricks."

MacAuley, 17, was a standout by turning aside 49 Nanaimo shots.

Policy Lack Cripples Shipyards Says Union

HINDLE
. . . urges steel mill

Provincial and federal government policies—or the lack of them—are helping Japan cripple British Columbia shipyards, says Neil Hindle, business agent for Local 191, International Brotherhood of Boilermakers.

He levelled the criticism today after Yarrows Ltd. laid off 43 shipfitters, nine burners and 10 helpers last week.

The layoffs were blamed on a delay of Japanese steel, caused by a strike of dockworkers in Japan.

Hindle said it is imperative that both levels of government work toward the creation of a steel industry in B.C.

"There are steel mills in the east and the federal government should help establish them in the west through its regional development program."

He condemned the provincial government's lack of action.

STEEL MILL

"We ship iron ore and coke to Japan in foreign bottoms to make the steel on which we are utterly dependent. Now that Premier Bennett has his hydro problems solved he should get busy with the establishment of steel mills.

"Tourism is fine and dandy—but to get muscle into an economy you have to have industrialization."

He warned that Japan will have an even higher standard of industrialization by the year 2000 and we could not afford to lag so far behind.

"If they can do it, we can."

Hindle added that establishment of a steel mill in B.C. would make the province the industrial centre of the west, sparking many new subsidiary industries.

MORE LAYOFFS?

John Wallace, general manager of Yarrows, was out of town today but Hindle said he knew that Wallace shared the same convictions.

Hindle said that layoff of welders was bound to follow the weekend's layoffs.

Wallace said Saturday the delay would probably last only two to three weeks.

Hindle was pessimistic:

"It's like pushing a rock up a hill. The layoffs come in large numbers but the rehiring is always in smaller ones. I am hopeful that Mr. Wallace will use every method at his disposal to meet this emergency. We have deadlines to meet and delays could mean loss of other contracts."

Hindle was returned for a second three-year term as business agent at elections held this weekend.

Also elected were: Donald Boon, president; Anthony Fraser, vice-president; Edward Polinsky, recording secretary; Ian Campbell, inspector; trustees, Frank Allen, Bart Laing and George Stuart.

KNOCKS COME HARD for Spanish apprentice bullfighter Antanio Gil as he learns his trade in Las Ventas Arena in Madrid. Gil survived this dramatic upending without injury. (AP Wirephoto.)

Noble Art of Bullfighting Falls Prey to Capitalists

MADRID (Reuters) — Spain's "Fiesta Brava," the noble art of bullfighting, is sinking into a decline marked by unfilled bull rings, lack of star matadors and small, feeble bulls which fall to the ground even before the fight begins.

The 1969 season has provided more scandals than any season in memory, including a clash between bull ring impresarios and bullfighters which has robbed the public of two of its favorite idols.

Major rings like Madrid provide second-rate spectacles and the press sends up daily howls of anger against financial interests which, it claims, are ruining the Spanish bullfight.

Trouble, which has been brewing for years, blew into the open when Spain's seven major bull ring owners, known as "Los Siete Granes," The Big Seven, announced a joint agreement to slash matadors' fees and raise ticket prices.

The big seven, who control 350 of the country's 600 bullrings, offered block contracts to the country's best bullfighters at reduced fees, claiming the contracts guaranteed matadors more fights and a higher total income.

Most top matadors accepted the lure, which provided that the number of times they fight no longer depends on the quality of their performances. As a result, fans have seen few top class exhibitions this year.

But two of the biggest crowd-pullers, millionaire matador Manuel Benitez El Cordobes and rising young idol Sebastian (Palomo) Linares, refused to tolerate pay cuts.

They declared war on the big seven, claiming the group were out for higher profits and not to benefit the public. The two formed a pact to fight only for percentages of the gate office, and are banned from Spain's major rings.

Fighting in small towns and villages, sometimes even in temporary portable rings, they are travelling through Spain, scoring repeated triumphs before packed crowds, while some major rings remain half empty.

Meanwhile, top bull fight critics claim many bulls have had their horns shaved" to reduce danger. They also lack size, maturity and ferocity, and the result is dull fights in which the bulls begin to fall over after a short gallop and a few passes by the matador.

Top Waitress

DETROIT (AP) — Carol Zaccardelli of Detroit said Sunday "I'm the happiest girl in the world" after hustling 440 yards with four glasses of champagne. Carol beat all the other waitresses in the 15th annual Waiters' and Waitresses' Race at Detroit, but it was waiter Roohy Naubash who claimed a world record time of three minutes 28 seconds for the event. Naubash topped the previous record by 12 seconds.

NONSUCH SAILS AGAIN in this replica of the Hudson's Bay Company's first ship, which left this spot on the Thames in June of 1668, returning from Canada the following year with a cargo of furs which founded the fortunes of the company. The new Nonsuch, built in North Devon and matching the specifications of the original at 43 tons displacement and 36 feet in length at the waterline, is to sail to Canada in 1970 as part of the Hudson's Bay Company's 300th anniversary celebrations.

. . . PHONES

B.C. Labor Minister Leslie Peterson said today the province has nothing to do with the strike situation since B.C. Telephone comes under jurisdiction of federal government regulations.

Telephone workers federation spokesman Bert Johns said in Vancouver the strike was called after last-minute conciliatory discussion Sunday failed.

B.C. Telephone spokesman for the Vancouver area Colin Patterson said long-distance calls were being handled relatively quickly in early hours of the strike.

He said there "may be some delays" as heavy business traffic begins during the day.

Patterson was urging customers for long-distance service to use the direct-dialling system for faster completion of calls.

. . . QUEBEC

When a few young Cardinal supporters told Mr. Tremblay they were thinking about joining the Levesque party he replied "we will stay as long as we can. Don't give up hope."

Premier Bertrand, 53, has expressed his preference for the federal system in Canada. He told the convention delegates he is prepared to propose a presidential system of government for Quebec by way of referendum "if the people want it."

He did not elaborate on how this system, if ever proposed and adopted, would be integrated within the Canadian constitution.

The education minister, 44, is a former dean of law at the University of Montreal and a businessman. His program included a nationalistic call for more toughness in relations with the rest of Canada.

He said after the election results he would ask the cabinet to consider his campaign "very seriously," adding that his strong showing at the leadership convention should entice his cabinet colleagues "to consider the consequesnces" of refusing his proposals.

Finance Minister Paul Dozois, a close friend and adviser of the Premier's, said in an interview after the leadership vote he sees no need for an election before the fall of 1970.

Standings in the national assembly at adjournment two weeks ago were: Union Nationale 55, Liberal 47, Independent three and vacant three.

Juvenile Home Site Within Week

Announcement of the southern Vacouver Island location of a new centre for 32 juvenile offenders will be made by Social Welfare Minister Dan Campbell within a week.

"We are in the final negotiating stage now," said Donald Bingham, social welfare department program director.

Construction of the facility was announced in April and will begin sometime this year.

A similar facility is planned for the lower mainland.

These new units are designed to relieve Brannan Lake school for boys near Nanaimo and Willingdon School for girls in Burnaby where "hard-core" juvenile offenders are sent along with other children.

Criticism Is Good, Says Bennett

Premier Bennett today praised the British Columbia Mediation Commission for being so roundly criticized.

Bennett, commenting on a decision which gave Vancouver city ploice a 17.5 per cent pay raise and firemen a 15.5 per cent hike, said, "it's very good when you're criticized by both sides."

Mayor Tom Campbell of Vancouver had accused the commission of selling city down the river in the decision while union spokesman, Ed Lawson also expressed disagreement with the binding settlement announced last week.

"Some of the labor bosses have said the commission is against them," said Bennett, "and now the mayor . . . says it's against the city bosses."

HOME GARDEN

Solve Shadeless Problem

By HILDA BEASTALL

Hilda

June has been a month of outdoor living for inventive homeowners and gardeners. Consistently warm weather prompted the need to eat and work in the open — if sufficent shade from sun was available.

Where tree shade was non-existent, temporary shelters of bamboo matting created just the desirable condition, perhaps slung as a screen between a couple of trees not yet large enought to provide ample shade.

During these outdoor sessions, plans are often made for next year's comfort, but unles ws get to work on them now, next year may see us in the same shameless predicament.

Take a look around at any of the building supply outlets and make a few notes on kinds of material suitable for screening a sitting out area.

Ornamental concrete blocks of various designs make desirable permanent "walls" in gardens, one requirement being that they should not block the passage of air.

If solid wood or plastic panels are preferred however, be sure to leave a foot or so space at top and bottom for circulation of air.

This condition is important not only in summer to prevent a build-up of heat within the shelter, but in winter to prevent an area of motionless cold air from forming and damaging plants needlessly.

The roofing of a garden shelter is ideally of some porous material such as plant growth (climbing plants) but these take time to grow.

Plywood and plastic sheets make a good and attractive subsitute, and climbing vines can be planted at the corners.

Before another hot spell, see that you have a pleasant shaded spot outdoors for family meals and recreation.

YOUR HEALTH

Checks Prevent Bad Scares

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

Alvares

Years ago a lovely young college woman came in to tell me that when she had had a Wassermann blood test made for syphilis — compulsory before marriage in her state — her doctor reported that she had the disease.

The only thing that kept her from becoming suicidal was the fact that she had never had any sexual contact with a man. Another Wassermann test quickly made showed that she was all right.

The false report had been made from the laboratory because that day they had had two girls with the same surname, and had switched the reports. And so my patient cheered up and married happily.

Another one of the first patients I remember who needlessly received a bad scare was told that her blood sugar was 170 mg. — indicating a decided diabetes. The poor woman, whose aunts had died of diabetes, was thrown into a dither.

When the Mayo Clinic laboratory, on two successive days, reported a blood sugar of 107 mg. (practically normal), I got a hunch and telephoned 1,000 miles to the patient's eminent home physician, a good friend of mine. In a few minutes, he called back to report, apologetically, that his laboratory had also reported 107 mg., but his secretary, perhaps weary after a hard day, had reversed the figures, and had made it 170.

★ ★ ★

A man came in, very disconsolate, to say that he was dying of scattered cancer. I said, "But you are overweight and look well; where on earth did you get the idea that you have an incurable cancer?" And he said, "My doctor found a red blood sedimentation rate of 110 mm."

I agreed that if I were to get such a laboratory report on my blood, I would be inclined to go and see my mortician; but I asked, "Didn't the doctor repeat the test?" The man said that he had not.

So I had two tests made on the next two days, and they were both reported as 2 mm., or perfectly normal, and indicative of excellent health. Then I telephoned the doctor, who, after glancing at the patient's record, said, "Oh, I am so sorry, my secretary copied the blood sugar report in the line we always use for the sedimentation rate."

It is human occasionally to err, and so I could go on telling of many such clerical mistakes. My purpose in telling these stories is not to undermine people's faith in laboratories; in my long life I have been aided by many excellent and trustworthy laboratories. All I want to do is to point out that it is not wise to scare the life out of a person, by giving him some very serious diagnosis, until one has had an all-important test repeated.

★ ★ ★

There is another type of mistake which on rare occasions is made in a laboratory. Every so often I see a very unhappy woman who, on the strength of one laboratory report, was told to live for the rest of her days on an anti-gout diet plus an anti-gout medicine.

Because gout is rare in women, and the patient did not have either the story or the findings of a gouty person, I had two tests of blood uric acid made, in two laboratores. When both reports were within limits of normal, I felt I could relieve the poor woman's mind.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Many Tried to Find Northwest Passage

By BOB BOWMAN

Bowman

Search for a Northwest passage, to provide a short route from Europe to the Orient, began early in the 16th century when Sebastian Cabot (son of John Cabot) made the first effort.

However the most enthusiastic supporter of the route was Dr. John Dee, a distinguished British mathematician who was consulted by a number of the early explorers including Martin Frobisher.

Unfortunately Dee was such a good mathematician, and made so many startling predications, that he was charged with necromancy and had to leave England in a hurry.

Sir John Franklin is believed to have discovered the Northwest passage before his expedition perished in 1847. He left records that were found many years later.

In the meantime Cptain Robert McClure was given credit for the discovery which he made while searching for Franklin in 1850.

However, McClure did not sail through the Arctic because his ship was caught in the ice and he and his men had to walk to Melville Island where they were rescued.

The first explorer to sail through the Northwest Passage was Roald Amundsen who took three years to get through from 1903 to 1906. The conquest had taken 400 years.

Perhaps the greatest achievement was that of the second ship to get through, the RCMP patrol boat St. Roch commanded by Sergeant Henry Larsen.

It left Vancouver on June 23, 1940, and took two years to get to Halifax. Then the St. Roch was fitted with stronger engines, and made the return trip in 86 days, travelling by a more notherly route than the trip from west to east.

The St. Roch was only 197 tons and 104 feet long, and has since been retired from service.

The ship has been preserved and is on display at the Marine Museum in Vancouver.

Since then the Royal Canadian Navy ship Labrador has crossed are Arctic, and the U.S. submarine Nautilus travelled under the ice from the Atlantic to the Pacific in four days!

"We should drop the club," said Sam. "It's near dead anyway. If you and I resigned there'd be only one-third of what the membership was a year ago."

Mary smiled. "It's not that bad," she told him. "Bob and Jane are still members."

Sam shook his head. "Not any more. They both dropped out last week. We'd still have half the membership we had a year ago if they hadn't."

How many members remained?

(Answer Tuesday)

Friday's Answer: Minimum 42 pennies: boys 9c each, girls 2c.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Eneyclopedia to Joyce Willacy, age 8, of Pinawa, Manitoba, for her question:

What makes the dead sea so salty?

The geography of the earth is always changing. The ups and downs usually change slowly, too slowly to be noticed in a human lifetime. The creation of the Dead Sea began many millions of years ago—which is a mere blink in the earth's history. A long saggy dent began to dip between the countries of Jordan and Israel. Rivers and merry streams ran down its sides and collected in the bottom of what is now the Jordan Valley. This water filled an ancient lake that was at least four times as big as the Dead Sea. The old lake covered the little Sea of Galilee and miles of the present-day Jordan River.

We say that rivers and most lakes are filled with fresh water. But this is not quite true. As streams flow along, they wash around pebbles and gravel and seep into rocky minerals. Water, especially running water, dissolves chemicals from different minerals and carries them away. There are always traces of various chemicals, even in so-called fresh water lakes and rivers. In the Jordan Valley, there are deep layers of rocks that contain bromines and other salty chemicals. The ancient sag in the earth's crust created deep underground springs. They still bring lots of dissolved salts to the surface.

Tons of Water

After many long ages, dirt and debris sifted down into the long valley. But clear, blue water stayed in the Sea of Gallilee. And the River Jordan flowed down and emptied into the deep Dead Sea. Every day, six million tons of water still flow down the Jordan into the Dead Sea. But there is no way out, for the salty-salty lake has no outlet. You would think that all this water would make the Dead Sea overflow and grow bigger. But it does not do this because of the hot desert sun.

Every day the warm sunbeams evaporate six million tons of water, just plain water, from the surface. But the salty chemicals dissolved in the water cannot evaporate into the air. So they stay behind. Meantime, each day, the Jordan dumps in more water with more dissolved chemicals. This river rises far north of the Dead Sea and flows right through the sparkling little Lake of Galilee. Its waters gather salty chemicals all along the way. In the floor of Lake Galilee there are springs that swell up with salty bromines from far below. The Jordan gathers these salty chemicals also and flows along to dump them all into the Dead Sea. During a sunny day, a filmy haze hangs over the Dead Sea, forming clouds that drift away and disappear in the bright desert sky. This is moisture evaporating from the water—and leaving the salty chemicals behind.

Some of the salty chemicals in the water form hard crusts on the rocks around the edges of the Dead Sea. No plants can grow in or around them and the banks are bare. No fish can live in the salty-salty water. But they can live in the waters of the Jordan River. Every day a number of unlucky fish are washed down by the river into the salty lake—where they soon perish. A few hungry sea gulls hover above in the hazy air waiting to grab the unfortunate fish when they float to the surface.

Andy sends a World Book Globe to Gail Garafalo, age 12, of Warmister, Pennsylvania, for her question:

What really makes a star shine?

We could say that a star is on fire, pouring forth heat and light. But that answer is too simple and besides, it is not strictly true. When we talk about fire, we mean the blazing combustion that goes on in a burning campfire. A star is not this sort of fire at all. The chemical combustion of a campfire requires oxygen fuel. The blazing activity of a star does not. It is powered by thermonuclear activity, the same type of atomic activity in the hydrogen bomb. Nuclear scientists are sure how the seething process works. And they are quite sure that some sort of nuclear activity is responsible for the light of the shining stars.

Nuclear activity changes the nuclei (or cores) of tiny atoms. Most likely a star burns by nuclear fision, a process that fuses smaller atoms to make larger ones. A nucleus is made of several atomic particles. When two nuclei fuse together, matter is converted into energy—into the seething nuclear energy that pours forth from a blazing star.

FAMILY PLAN FOR HIJACKER

MIAMI (AP)—A Spanish-speaking man holding a knife and a bottle marked "explosives" hijacked a jetliner with a 89 persons aboard to Cuba. His wife and teen-aged daughter were with him.

The Newark-to-Miami Eastern Airlines DC-8 returned safely to Miami Sunday after spending several hours in Havana.

The hijacker and his family, issued tickets under the names of "Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Perez", remained in the Cuban capital.

•

Second Officer David Savage said a bottle labelled "Danger: Explosives" was tied to the hijacker's wrist by a string.

Stewardess Rose Mary Evans, of Atlanta, Ga., said the man called to her and drew a knife.

"He couldn't speak English but he beckoned me to unlock the door," she said. "He didn't say anything."

The pilot, Capt. Bernard L. Hutain, said the incident occurred just south of Norfolk, Va., and the man, in his 50s, said "Havana, Havana". Hutain added: "I got the message."

Air Controllers Seek Probe End

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization has warned it will not tolerate further government investigation of last week's slowdown, raising the possibility of a new—and possibly worse—air transportation crisis.

But the director of the Federal Aviation Administration's air traffic service, William J. Flener, said the investigation will continue.

Between 250 and 300 controllers called in sick last Wednesday and Thursday, while those who reported enforced FAA safety rules to the letter, forcing airlines to cancel hundreds of flights and delay others for hours.

The controllers complained of being understaffed and overworked.

When the slowdown ended Friday morning, FAA investigators began quizzing every controller who reported sick, asking each to furnish a physician's statement.

Flener said the interviewing was stopped Sunday but was to be resumed today.

"If this is continued today, we think the whole thing will blow up and aviation will come to a stop," the organization's vice-chairman, James R. Ean, said in New York. He said he feared an "emotional and spontaneous" reaction by controllers in key cities, even though organization officials were urging members to "cool it."

In Boston, F. Lee Bailey, counsel for the controllers, said: "If it happens again Monday these men will walk out. They all have lawyers and if the investigators want to talk with them, we are available."

Bailey said he protested to the department of transportation during the weekend what he called "harassment" when investigators summoned controllers from their radar sets to be questioned.

Flener said the goal of the investigation is "to find out the nature of the so-called spontaneous illness." The next step, he said, will be up to Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe and FAA Administrator John H. Shaffer.

Shaffer, he said, ordered the investigation.

The controllers are forbidden by law to strike, and the FAA threatened disciplinary action if they conducted what amounted to one.

Last Thursday Jack Maher, national co-ordinator of the organization, said controllers were enforcing air safety rules. In addition, he said, "we are telling our people if there is any indication that physically or mentally they are not able to do top-notch jobs, they should not go to work, call in sick, have everything they need taken care of. And if they are working, to try not to overextend themselves."

Friday, Maher said the membership was cautioned "to beware of overstressing the safety committee recommendation which refers to getting incapacitated through illness and fatigue to the point where mental alertness is diminished."

On the same day, Shaffer said there "is recognized need for additional air traffic control staffing to meet the demands on the system."

U.S. to Close Air Base In Spain

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States next December will reduce from two to one the number of operational Air Force bases it maintains in Spain, the defence department said Saturday.

The announcement said the base at Moron would be placed in a caretaker status while the Torrejon air base near Madrid would continue operation at its present level.

The action followed by one day an announcement that the United States and Spain had renewed the defence agreement under which the U.S. maintains four military installations on Spanish soil.

Today's announcement will result in the removal from Spain of approximately 1,600 military personnel and 2,100 civilian employees and dependents, the pentagon said.

Kon Tiki Theory Under Attack

By COLIN HALE

PANAMA CITY (Reuters) — Strong coastal current affected a raft sailing from Peru to Panama so much that the Kon Tiki theary that ancient Peruvians floated to Polynesia must be doubted, the expedition leader said Saturday.

Eugene Savoy, 42, who commanded the raft Kuvique, said the craft was carried in a nearly complete circle and was at the mercy of the Humboldt Current running between Peru and Central America.

Savoy, a resident of Lima, Peru, said the experience strengthened his earlier skepticism about the theory of Norwegian maritime explorer Thor Heyerdahl that primitive people were able to drift from South America to populate the Polynesian islands, about 4,200 miles across the Pacific.

Heyerdahl set out in a fragile Balsa-wood raft called Kon-Tiki from Callao in Peru in 1947 and reached an island near Tahiti after a 97-day journey.

But Savoy claims Heyerdahl invalidated his experiment by first being towed to a spot 300 miles offshore to escape the powerful Humboldt Current.

Savoy's own three-man expedition, organized by the Andrean Explorers Club of which he is president, set out from the Peruvian port of Salaverry April 14.

CARRIED BY STORM

The reed-and-bamboo raft was blown off course by a storm and carried almost to the border between Panama and Costa Rica — farther north than the intended destination of Panama City.

After June 1, a whirlpool-like current carried them southward again along the Colombian coast they had passed earlier.

By June 7, they were opposite Punte Cruces in Colombia, where they ran aground before re-entering the Humboldt Current, which brought them into Panama bay this week.

Their misadventures lengthened the journey to 2,400 miles from 1,500.

LINKED BY CURRENT

The crew lived mostly off fish and turtles and had several fights with sea-snakes and sharks.

The voyage convinced Savoy that ancient Peruvians could not have travelled systematically by raft to Polynesia as Heyerdahl maintains.

He said: "The Humbolt Current flows north, from zero to 400 kilometers off the coast, direct to Panama and is a direct link between Peru and Central America.

"The current to Polynesia begins 400 to 500 kilometers from the coast. It is doubtful if the ancient Peruvians used the Humboldt Current to go to Polynesia in primitive times except for accidental one-way trips of no cultural significance."

Savoy also does not believe the theory Heyerdahl now is trying to prove in his papayrus boat Ra, that Egyptian culture may have been carried across the Atlantic to Central America in similar craft about 3,000 years ago.

Kon Tiki Theory Under Attack

By COLIN HALE

PANAMA CITY (Reuters) — Strong coastal current affected a raft sailing from Peru to Panama so much that the Kon Tiki theary that ancient Peruvians floated to Polynesia must be doubted, the expedition leader said Saturday.

Eugene Savoy, 42, who commanded the raft Kuvique, said the craft was carried in a nearly complete circle and was at the mercy of the Humboldt Current running between Peru and Central America.

Savoy, a resident of Lima, Peru, said the experience strengthened his earlier skepticism about the theory of Norwegian maritime explorer Thor Heyerdahl that primitive people were able to drift from South America to populate the Polynesian islands, about 4,200 miles across the Pacific.

Heyerdahl set out in a fragile Balsa-wood raft called Kon-Tiki from Callao in Peru in 1947 and reached an island near Tahiti after a 97-day journey.

But Savoy claims Heyerdahl invalidated his experiment by first being towed to a spot 300 miles offshore to escape the powerful Humboldt Current.

Savoy's own three-man expedition, organized by the Andrean Explorers Club of which he is president, set out from the Peruvian port of Salaverry April 14.

CARRIED BY STORM

The reed-and-bamboo raft was blown off course by a storm and carried almost to the border between Panama and Costa Rica — farther north than the intended destination of Panama City.

After June 1, a whirlpool-like current carried them southward again along the Colombian coast they had passed earlier.

By June 7, they were opposite Punte Cruces in Colombia, where they ran aground before re-entering the Humboldt Current, which brought them into Panama bay this week.

Their misadventures lengthened the journey to 2,400 miles from 1,500.

LINKED BY CURRENT

The crew lived mostly off fish and turtles and had several fights with sea-snakes and sharks.

The voyage convinced Savoy that ancient Peruvians could not have travelled systematically by raft to Polynesia as Heyerdahl maintains.

He said: "The Humbolt Current flows north, from zero to 400 kilometers off the coast, direct to Panama and is a direct link between Peru and Central America.

"The current to Polynesia begins 400 to 500 kilometers from the coast. It is doubtful if the ancient Peruvians used the Humboldt Current to go to Polynesia in primitive times except for accidental one-way trips of no cultural significance."

Savoy also does not believe the theory Heyerdahl now is trying to prove in his papayrus boat Ra, that Egyptian culture may have been carried across the Atlantic to Central America in similar craft about 3,000 years ago.

Trapped Natal Miners Found Alive

By JOE WILL

NATAL (CP) — Three tough coal miners, who told rescuers they could have lasted three weeks longer, walked into the fresh air Sunday night after being trapped for more than 80 hours in a partially-flooded mine shaft.

Rescue came just hours after officials said hope was fading rapidly.

"We knew you would get us," Donald Evans told the men who clawed their way through 68 feet of solid coal in 15 hours Sunday after tapping sounds were heard.

Donald Evans, 54, John Krall, 57, both of Natal, and Frank Kutcher, 53, of Frank, were found by rescue crews at 7:55 p.m. PDT and walked out of the mine unaided just five minutes later.

The trio told rescuers they were buffetted by rising waters in the pit but managed to stay on their feet and fight their way to dry ground in a side shaft. They said they tried five possible escape routes but were blocked by washed out timbers and collapsed tunnels.

"They were really camped in down there," said mine manager Irv Morgan. "They used sack cloth we normally use for carrying ventilation pipes in the tunnels and made beds for themselves."

He said they fixed up a roof to keep the constantly dripping water off them.

"Hell, we were holed up in there," Evans told rescuers. "We could have lasted 21 days."

They were trapped shortly before noon Thursday when a party of 10 miners was blasting the roof of a small dome 1,700 feet from the entrance to the Balmer South mine operated by Kaiser Resources Ltd. in this southeastern British Columbia town just 15 miles from the Alberta border.

The blast tore through the roof of the shaft and into older workings that had since filled up with water. The crashing rubble and water killed three other miners. Four escaped.

Rescue workers heard faint tapping sounds at about 5:15 a.m. Sunday and they and the following shift clawed their way through in less than 15 hours.

"The men went through 68 feet of solid coal—more than a two-day job—in record time," said M. F. Clemmer, spokesman for Kaiser.

He said when the three men walked from the mine it looked as if they were going to work and not coming from it.

"It was the most beautiful thing in the world."

The men were in good spirits as they left the mine.

"We knew you would come to get us," Evans said.

"Wouldn't a beer taste good," said Kutcher.

"If you're going to the Kootenay get me one," Krall said to friends as the three miners headed for the Michel-Natal Hospital for a checkup.

About 3,000 people were gathered around the mine site when the three men walked out with their rescuers.

"They are three tough men," said Mr. Morgan.

He said the men had followed a schedule of tapping every two hours to let rescuers know they were alive.

"When we heard them we thought there was at least one alive. That three would be alive and well was beyond our wildest expectations."

Rescue workers scheduled to go off duty at 4 p.m. Sunday refused to leave and stayed on until the trapped men were freed.

"We could hear a tap . . . more like a thud. We'd hear it . . . then listen . . . then we couldn't hear it," rescue worker Bill Milburn of Fernie, B.C., said today.

"We were never sure what it was. It was never clear that it was someone banging," he said.

But it was enough to send the rescue workers to driving a 70-foot shaft through solid coal to the trapped men. The feverish last effort by the rescuers took 12 hours; drilling, blasting and removing debris.

As the last few feet were cleared away, Mr. Morgan, underground superintendent James Anderson and pit boss Arnold Webster were the first to

Troops Cut By Canada

Reduction Over 3 Years

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Leo Cadieux announced today that Canada's armed forces will be reduced to a strength of 80,000 to 85,000 during the next three years. Present strength is about 98,000.

Mr. Cadieux told the Commons that the government will concentrate wherever possible on reducing administrative and support activities to provide a higher ratio of operational to non-operational personnel than in the past.

This entails a re-examination of command and control activities with a view to reducing the headquarters staff, including that in Ottawa.

Mr. Cadieux said it is planned to reach the new manpower levels without introducing a program of forced attrition.

"We fully recognize that this will result in some temporary personnel imbalances within certain trades and specialties, but we are confident these can be overcome by making available opportunities for retraining."

Maritime Command will continue in the anti-submarine role, using most of the existing equipment, he informed the House.

CONSIDER MORE STEPS

However, the government was considering a replacement aircraft for the sub-hunting Argus, now operating from Maritimes bases.

The possibility of widening the roles open to maritime forces was being explored "in response to the government's policy directive."

"In particular, we expect more emphasis will be placed on activities relating to Canadian sovereign interests in our adjacent waters, and the sea bed," said Mr. Cadieux.

"In this context our Arctic territories take on particular significance."

Mobile Command will continue to be organized in combat groups and the Canadian airborne regiment, kept on standby in Canada for possible use abroad under the United Nations, is being retained.

STOCK SALES TUMBLE TOWARD RECORD LOWS

The industrial index was down 5.41 by mid-afternoon.

France to Keep Independent Line

PARIS (AP)—Maurice Schumann, France's new foreign minister. dampened today any idea that his appointment might mean a change in the policies of Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

"The foreign policy defined by the founder of the Fifth Republic will be carried out by the new government," Schumann told the opening of a world medical assembly. He said this policy, based on the independence of France and of Europe, served the peace of the world.

Schumann, 58, once resigned from a Gaullist government after de Gaulle rejected British entry into the Common Market without telling his ministers in advance. But Schumann, known as the voice of France on BBC during the war years, later reconciled with de Gaulle and took another ministerial job in 1967.

The new cabinet, appointed Sunday by President Georges Pompidou on the recommendation of Premier Jacques Chaban-Delmas, meets for the first time today at Elysee Palace.

Schumann succeeds Michel Debre, a hard and pure Gaullist. Debre had wished to remain at the foreign ministry to oversee execution of de Gaulle's ideas, but as a compromise finally agreed to become defence minister. In his new job, Debre is No. 2 man to Chaban-Delmas.

There are those who thought Schumann's appointment, and that of Valery Giscard d'Estaing as finance minister, heralded the beginning of a new liberal era in French foreign policy.

DID NOT BREAK

One of the co-founders of the now-defunct Mouvement Republicain Populaire, a Roman Catholic party that sought European unity after the Second World War, Schumann strongly disproved of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's decision to keep Britain out of the Common Market. But he never broke with the general over it.

Giscard d'Estaing had been finance minister under de Gaulle from January, 1962, to January, 1966, but then helped form a splinter group called Independent Republicans who said they were basically for de Gaulle but reserved the right to disagree with him.

Giscard d'Estaing is known to favor both British entry into the Common Market and political integration in Europe. He took the job after former premier Antoine Pinay, also an Independent Republican, turned it down Saturday despite Pompidou's urging.

Bertrand Victorious After Violent Meet

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand was confirmed Saturday as Union Nationale party leader.

Delegates gave him a 389-vote margin over Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal during a weekend convention marred by demonstrations, bombings and charges of election-rigging.

Mr. Bertrand, interim leader since Daniel Johnson's death last fall, polled 1,327 against 938 votes for Mr. Cardinal. Twenty two votes went to Andre Leveille, a Montreal back-bencher.

Three violence incidents marked the arrival Friday of more than 2,000 delegates from Quebec's 108 ridings—a Molotov cocktail set furniture afire in a hotel lobby, a gunpowder bomb exploded in a mail box and two cars were set on fire.

Then Saturday, a few hours before the voting, the 30,000-member Quebec Civil Service Union marched on the convention site at the Coliseum. A two-hour skirmish between police and about 3,000 rock-throwing demonstrators ended when the marchers were sprayed with tear-gas. Three policemen were injured.

Police said 33 demonstrators were charged with disturbing the peace.

Cultural Affairs Minister Jean-Noel Tremblay, a strong supporter of Mr. Cardinal and a well-known Quebec nationalist, said after the vote that Mr. Bertrand's election had been rigged.

He charged at a news conference that the premier's campaign organizers had purchased votes and "the Mafia was there with money to threaten and to influence delegates."

Mr. Tremblay, who is prepared to work in Mr. Bertrand's cabinet "if he wants me", said two students told him they had been offered $1,000 each plus summer jobs at $100 a week if they voted for the premier.

He added that he was sure Mr. Bertrand was unaware of this and mentioned the name of a "notorious Montreal gangster" reported to be in town for the three-day convention.

GREAT VICTORY

"We won a great victory because our leader (Mr. Cardinal) collected 42 per cent of the ballots despite a rigged vote," Mr. Tremblay said.

In his victory speech, Premier Bertrand said it is important "to pull in the elbows because united we will win and we will defeat the opposition in the next election."

Mr. Cardinal said later he is prepared to remain in the party to fight for the ideas he endorsed during his leadership campaign "if our partisans think I can serve Quebec."

But the Cardinal cheering section in the 10,000-seat Coliseum wasn't very enthusiastic. Boos as well as insults greeted Mr. Bertrand as he walked up to the podium to appeal for party unity.

A group of Cardinal supporters, including the late Premier Daniel Johnson's 22-year-old son, Marc, indicated they would leave the party and join Rene Levesque's separatist Party Quebecois.

Phone Workers Out, Island Unaffected

A strike which sent more than 3,000 telephone workers off the job at lower mainland exchanges from Hope to Squamish at the weekend has not yet affected Victoria.

Island operations of B.C. Telephone could be affected, however, depending on progress toward settlement with the striking Federation of B.C. Telephone Workers.

The strike was called for the lower mainland at 6:30 a.m. today after contract negotiations collapsed Saturday.

First pickets appeared at 6:40 a.m. at the B.C. Telephone plant in suburban New Westminster, and within 30 minutes switchboard operators in downtown Vancouver and two other operations left their posts.

The strike is a rotation affair, the union has said, meaning only some employees walk off the job at first, while the remainder continue to work.

Later the strikers will return to work and the others will leave their jobs.

As switchboard operators left their places this morning and those coming on shift refused to cross the picket lines, supervisory personnel took their places to maintain service.

A similar process would lilely take place in Victoria should the strike spread to this region, said Glynn Jones, area spokesman for B.C. Telephone.

"The federation has not yet given us any indication as to what they plan to do next, but the strike has not so far affected Victoria or any part of the Island.

"The union has indicated, however, that any strike here would be on a rotation bases. Supervisory personnel are being used effectively on the mainland, and have been alerted they would be used the same way here to maintain service," Jones said.

Sprinter Smith More Human Than Symbol

By STEVE HUME

Symbols, especially when they are people, have a disturbing way of becoming more human the nearer you get to them.

Tommie Smith, Black Power athlete who got bounced from the U. S. Olympic team for advocating from the Mexico City victory stand the social philosophy that has millions of white Americans quaking in their boots, lost a big chunk of his fire-breathing image Saturday.

He showed up to run the Y-Times International 220-yard dash looking like someone modelling the latest thing in sweatsuits for a Playboy magazine take-out, and he left looking just as cool and unruffled.

In between he managed to sign autographs, talk with a gagle of awed youngsters hanging around from morning age-class competition, slip in an official introduction to the crowd, and tie Harry Jerome's existing meet record with a fluid ease that stunned the 2,000 spectators at Centennial Stadium.

Warming up among the rank and file athletes, his blue Pan Am Games sweatsuit holding no measure of anonymity, he looked like a thoroughbred, rangy, loose, packed with latent speed and capable of a world record any time he wanted one.

But he didn't come on like the aloof, taut, high-strung stereotype of a super-star is supposed to act.

He had a genial grin for anyone who spoke to him, and time to talk with kids, coaches, officials and fans alike.

When he sauntered up to the meet recorder and asked with an easy smile, "So who've we got to run with me?" nobody took it as the supercilious insult of a super-athlete at a provincial track meet.

It was rhetorical question, nothing more, for it didn't really matter who was running in the race.

And when the 25-year-old, 180-pound athlete got onto the track with his red and blue U.S. singlet and shorts, everyone knew it was a rhetorical question.

Smith looked almost lazy coming out of the fourth lane blocks with a relaxed stride and loose arm-motion.

Then, halfway through the turn his knees came up and he exploded into a blinding acceleration that left 9.5 hundred sprinter Larry Matthews of Tacoma floundering 10 yards behind.

It was an incredible burst of speed reminiscent of last year's Olympic Preview

Smoother Relations With France Coming?

By CY FOX

PARIS (CP) — Canadian diplomats here were meeting today to consider whether appointment of Maurice Schumann as foreign minister in the new French cabinet will mean what appearances indicate—a mellowing of relations between Paris and the Ottawa government.

Observers in the French capital, predicting a less rigid approach by France to international affairs generally, also cite Rene Pleven's appointment to the justice portfolio as possibly having implications for foreign policy.

President Georges Pompidou already has told Prime Minister Trudeau, in a message, of sharing the Canadian leader's desire to "strengthen between our two countries the friendship based on our affinities and common interests."

New appointments in the Gaullist government following this month's presidential elections were announced Sunday night.

TAKES OVER DEFENCE

There could be considerable ill-feeling among more traditionalist Gaullists about removal from the foreign affairs portfolio of Michel Debre who takes over as defence minister.

Debre, a strong supporter of former president de Gaulle's policies, is reported to have reacted coldly to his transfer, interpreted by some as a demotion.

But his attitudes towards world problems still have vocal support among newly-organized defenders of Gallist "orthodoxy." They regard the general's policies towards Quebec as one hallmark of the principles now in danger of being "sold out" by men they consider dangerously revisionist—Pompidou and Premier Chaban-Delmas.

Prime significance of Schumann's appointment is generally seen to lie in a more flexible French attitude towards British entry into the European Common Market, with one left-wing newspaper today terming him an "Anglophile."

DIDN'T LIKE WITHDRAWAL

Pleven, a former premier from Brittany, has criticized French military withdrawal from NATO—a fact cited by observers predicting a more "Atlantic" orientation for French foreign policy in future.

Pierre Rouanet, biographer of Pompidou, says in a magazine article today that Jacques Foccart, Gaullist mystery-man alleged by a British newspaper to be associated with the general's Canadian policy, will not be reinstated to the influential position he enjoyed in government circles under de Gaulle.

Foccart, who lost a key African affairs post following de Gaulle's April 28 resignation from the presidency, recently has been dubbed "poor Foccart" by friends, Rouanet says.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Record Declines for Day

The Toronto stock market was on its way to its worst daily loss on record just before the close today. Volume was the most active it has been in recent weeks.

The industrial index led the plunge, falling 5.41 to 172.94 by midafternoon. It was down 5.47 earlier in the day.

The biggest previous daily drop on the industrial index was 4.02 on June 11.

AT TORONTO losses outnumbered gains by about 14 to 1.

Base metals and golds were at lows for the year.

Bank, chemical and real estate issues led the drop.

Among banks, Nova Scotia lost 1¾ to 19¾, Canadian Imperial 1¼ to 18⅜, Royal 1 to 19⅛, Toronto-Dominion ¾ to 19 and Montreal ¼ to 13⅞.

AT NEW YORK the market was jolted to another loss today as continued concern over tight money again weighed it down.

Trading was fairly active near the close.

The Dow Jones industrial average at 1:30 p.m. was off 7.95 at 868.21. The Dow had been off 9.05 at 1 p.m. Brokers said there apparently was some bargain hunting among the blue chip issues.

Losses led gains by about 9,000 issues.

Prices near the close included Pennzoil United off ⅞ at 34⅝; Occidental Petroleum, off 1¾ at 35; United Aircraft, off 2⅛ at 63; Avco preferred, off 5½ at 52, and Natomas, off 4⅝.

Prices generally were lower on the American Stock Exchange.

AT LONDON the stock market rallied strongly today with equities higher over a wide front.

British funds also were firm, with gains of up to ½. Leading industrials recorded numerous gains.

Hudson's Bay rose 2s 6d to 152s 6d. Bowaters added 1s 1½d.

The continuing slide in trans-Atlantic markets and a still lower dollar premium brought widespread losses to dollar stocks. Canadian Pacific led the decline in Canadians with an 11-point fall to 189. Pacific Pete dropped 5½ points to 84½ while Hollinger, Inco and Trans-Canada Pipe lost up to 4¾ points. Banks lost several shillings.

Volume for both markets at 1 p.m. was 740,361 shares compared with 449,656 at the same time Friday.

AT VANCOUVER prices hit the skids again today in sympathey with a decline across the continent.

They were down, with only a relatively small number of mining and industrial issues managing to keep their heads above water. All the oils traded were down.

Volume up to 11 o'clock was 2,000,000 shares.

In the industrials, Driver, EDP, House of Stein, Fields and Whonnock Lumber all took substantial losses.

In the mines, Buttle, Brenda, Churchill, Copperidge, Gibraltar, Largo, Magnum, Northwest Ventures, Radex, Silver Arrow, Stannex and Utica were all off. Casino reversed the trend, putting on 11 cents at 90 cents on trades of 105,900.

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat futures advanced more than 2 cents a bushel on the Board of Trade today on a variety of influences.

Corn futures advanced nearly 2 cents a bushel but came under profit-taking late in the session that nearly halved the price rise.

Trade was active through most of the session and public interest, generated by reports of weather problems in small grains, was high.

The advance of wheat futures got under way on the opening.

The Russian wheat crop may be sharply lower this year, some trade sources noted, because of weather difficulties.

Argentina also had troubles with her wheat crop and may have to turn to the U.S. for purchase or barter.

These factors influenced buying but profit-taking later trimmed advances.

Near the close new buying sent prices to highs for the day. Rye futures also advanced, largely on the strength in wheat.

Oats prices also tended to yield under profit-taking but closed with small advances.

At the close, wheat was up to 2 higher, July 1.29¾; corn mixed, July 1.28¼; oats higher, July 62⅝; rye higher, July 1.17¾; soybeans mixed, July 2.66¼.

Bulk Handlers Installed At Superport

VANCOUVER (CP) — Installation of bulk coal-handling equipment has begun at Roberts Bank, the first outerport in North America designed to handle the giant dry-bulk carriers now coming into frequent use in international shipping.

The National Harbors Board said today the first phase of the development, to be ready to receive ships later this year, has been virtually completed.

The 50-acre site has been created mainly from material dredged from the area. It is connected to the mainland by a three-mile causeway, along which railways will carry cargoes for shipping from the port.

$ EXCHANGE

VICTORIA—Purchase of U.S. funds in terms of the Canadian dollar was quoted by the Royal Bank today at $1.07⅝ for cheques, $1.07½ for cash, $1.06½ for silver. Sales were $1.08⅝ for cheques and $1.08½ for cash.

MONTREAL (CP) — The U.S. dollar in terms of Canadian funds was unchanged at $1.08 1-16. Pound sterling was up 1-16 at $2.58⅝.

NEW YORK (CP) — Canadian dollar unchanged at 92 17-32 in terms of U.S. funds. Pound sterling up 7-64 at $2.39 3-32.

Fire Hazard Drops Sharply After Widely Spread Rain

By STEVE HUME

Rain and a mass of extremely moist air over most of the province brought relief to a 2,500-man army battling 324 forest fires at the weekend.

The British Columbia Forest Service reported the number of active blazes throughout the province is down to a total of 284 today, and the number of men on the actual fire line has been reduced to 1,400.

Spokesman Ray Wormald said rain has reduced over-all provincial fire-hazard ratings from extreme Saturday to low and moderate this morning.

"All fires are currently quiet, and mopping up operations are going ahead very quickly, with fire-fighters taking full advantage of the break in the weather to get new, more elaborate fireguards built."

He said the heavy overcast covering most of B.C. will not halt water-bombing operations by eight aircraft and a number of helicopters equipped with monsoon buckets.

A total of 65 bulldozers are also stillengaged in support operations.

Meanwhile, the weather system that means sighs of relief for grimy, embattled fire-fighters promises glum days ahead for Victoria sun worshippers, the weather office reports.

"GOOD HEAVENS", worries three-year-old Roberta Olmstead, 2622 Rose. After so many days of sunshine the feel of falling rain seemed almost a new experience for a little girl. But for many Victorians weary of a long month of little moisture it was a welcome sight. (Bill Halkett photo.)

Entire Province Under Cloud

Weatherman Alan McQuarrie said this morning a Pacific maritime cold front moving over the province means showers everywhere in B.C., but mostly in coastal regions.

All of the province is currently under cloud cover, he said, and Victorians can expect only partial clearing with continuing cool westerlies and low temperature in the mid 50s and low 60s during the next week.

He said that although most showers will be restricted to coastal regions, westerly winds will push moist, saturated air into interior and northern areas, which should retard any spread of current fires.

The moist air has helped enough in coastal areas that the Vancouver fire district, which includes Vancouver Island, has reported only 12 fires and a moderate hazard rating.

And that means sun-lovers are outnumberrd two to one as loggers prepare to return to the woods with the possibility of the lifting of restrictions.

"It's quite likely certain restrictions will be lifted in Vancouver Island logging areas if cooler, wetter weather continues, the forest service spokesman said, but he would not speculate on the possibility of a government lift of Zone One regulations today.

In the meantime, rain varying from light to "lots of it" sent loggers back to work early today as operators awaited word from the B.C. forest service before opening regular schedules.

TOO QUICK A RESPONSE TO PRAYERS

They prayed for rain at the Sunday morning service in St. John's Anglican Church—rain to quench the fires that are threatening B.C. forests.

The local response was immediate. It rained all afternoon and almost washed out the church's family picnic at Esquimalt Lagoon.

"But we carried on regardless," a member of the congregation said.

NEW ZEALAND High Commissioner to Canada, Dean Eyre, is in Victoria as part of a week-long visit to British Columbia. He was a guest at Government House today, and will meet Premier Bennett Tuesday. After two speaking engagements in Vancouver on Thursday, he will visit Kamloops Friday and stop in provincial capitals on his way back to Ottawa to talk with the premiers and lieutenant-governors of the prairie provinces.

FORSEY
. . . 'outrageous'

'Frustration Knocks Out Brightest'

A former University of British Columbia professor said today some of the best university students are dropping out because of frustration either from the way the universities are run, what they teach or how they teach it.

Dr. Norman MacKenzie, also a former Canadian Senator, made his comment at the beginning of a two-day University of Victoria symposium on the role of the university in contemporary society.

●

"Why is it that some of our brightest people don't find in the universities what they want to do, and end up by dropping out in frustration?

"Among those who fail only five per cent do not have the intellectual capabilities to work in an academic environment."

Dr. MacKenzie pointed out that 33 per cent qualify for university education, but the actual number of people who manage to get one is far lower.

He spoke from the floor during a question period following a speech by labor relations expert Dr. Eugene Forsey, a Carleton University professor.

Dr. Forsey said many students come unprepared for university work, and blamed the public school system.

He cited the example of students who are unable to write well:

●

"It's outrageous that people like this should be let loose upon the universities."

Dr. Forsey said while professors and graduates of universities may bring about social, political and economic change, the institution itself is not an instrument of change.

"It is the function of the universities to provide professional training, but it should also be their function to provide professional education.

"And in this respect they appear to me somewhat deficient—for one thing, they let in too many people who are incapable, or ill prepared, or both.

"But against these difficulties every university should exercise unceasing vigilance, practise unceasing self-criticism, wage unceasing war."

●

In answer to a question from Vancouver Sun publisher Stuart Keate, Dr. Forsey said McGill University lecturer Stanley Gray should not have received a Canada Council grant for political science studies.

Gray was fired by McGill earlier this year for leading student demonstrations on the Montreal campus, and his grant came under fire from members of Parliament.

Bryant Insists Secret Sessions Will Continue

By SUSAN RILEY

Esquimalt council will continue to hold closed committee meetings, Mayor Ray Bryant said today.

At closed committee of the whole meeting, council tried to restrict discussion to "proper matters" but "sometimes a counsellor may bring up something he forgot to mention" at the open council meeting.

Mr. Bryant said this was an exception.

"Proper matters" for secret discussion, according to Bryant and the Municipal Act include land aquisition, and staff and personnel matters.

He said council also deals with many matters involving the provincial and federal governments which they request be kept confidential.

MORE THAN SAANICH

Esquimalt holds more secret meetings than Saanich, for example, because the municipality deals with the defence department more than any other municipality, he said.

About 25 per cent of the municipality's population work for the department.

Tonight council will hold no closed committee of the whole meeting.

Except for one April meeting the semi-monthly council meetings have been followed by secret sessions since October.

"It is strictly a co-incidence that we are not having a committee of the whole meeting tonight," said Bryant. He said there was nothing to discuss which merited a committee of the whole meeting.

NOT AUTOMATIC

He said Esquimalt was not like Oak Bay which, until last week, automatically made all committee of the whole meetings secret.

"Esquimalt council always passes a motion in advance before resolving itself into a committee of the whole, "and the press have been asked to leave and they normally do."

He said discussions of assessments, which Oak Bay kept secret, should be held in open council.

TAKES LONGER

He said closed committee meetings in Esquimalt often last longer than open council meetings which precede them because aldermen are more relaxed when they don't have an audience.

"When things are informal, discussion after takes longer."

Esquimalt's A committee meetings, dealing with fire, finance and zoning are open to the press Bryant said, except for certain matters which must be excluded in the public interest.

"I don't see that our situation in Esquimalt is any different from that in Saanich," said Bryant. In Saanich council goes into secret session for land acquisition and personnel discussions.

He said he hopes the press and council don't "declare war on each other" over the matter of secrecy and public interest.

CAR TEST EXTENSION RULED OUT

There will be no extension of the July 1 deadline for the testing of all motor vehicles in Victoria at the provincial testing station.

Attorney - General Leslie Peterson announced today the July 1 deadline would remain in effect.

Up to the end of May 67,279 of an extimated 80,000 vehicles registered in the Greater Victoria area have been approved at the testing station.

"This is a relatively high percentage," said Peterson.

The station has not been too busy lately," he added.

A spokesman for the attorney-general's office said no regulations specifying exactly what will happen to drivers caught on the road without a provincial sticker after July 1 have yet been sent to Victoria police.

"We're looking on the positive rather than the negative side," the spokesman said.

WARMING UP for his Shrine Circus act, Benny Cristiani is forced into Memorial Arena corridor while men set up three rings and lion cages on the arena floor for shows today at 4 p.m. and 8 p.m. Handstand is executed under the watchful eye of aerialist Petrova Luvas. There will be two more performances of the circus Tuesday.

HOSPITAL VOTE BY YEAR'S END

Greater Victoria ratepayers will be asked before the end of 1969 to decide whether to spend an estimated $20 million to $30 million on acute care hospital beds in this area.

The total amount of the expenditure was discussed this morning by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark and the advisory committee to the Capital Region Hospital District Planning Board.

Neither Loffmark nor committee chairman Dr. A. C. Pickles, would comment on the total amount after their hour-long meeting.

★

"It will be a whopper," said Dr. Pickles.

Loffmark said he has heard estimates ranging from $20 to $30 million.

"I don't want to guess, however," he said. "I don't want in any way to inhibit the advisory committee's planning."

Pickles and Loffmark agreed that the roles of the province and regional boards were clearer after the meeting.

Loffmark said the only condition laid down to the advisory committee was that at least 75 acute care beds for Saanich must be included in the new referendum.

The acute care beds along with 75 extended care beds already approved, will be located in a new hospital to be built north of Elk Lake.

★

"All recommendations on extended care beds have been accepted in principle," he said.

"There is a hold-up on siting in two cases, but this should be cleared up very shortly."

Loffmark said there was agreement that the new referendum should be in general terms with specific allocations left up to the committee.

Water Crisis Evaporates As Concrete Pipe Arrives

By JIM HUME

Greater Victoria's potential water crisis was ended over the weekend with the first deliveries of 2,500 feet of concrete pipe from Portland, Oregon.

The pipe, purchased for $94,000, will be installed to link Sooke Lake with the Sooke tunnel.

Delivery of the pipe, plus the present wet weather, has eliminated the total ban on watering between the hours of 1 p.m. and 5 p.m.

As of today odd-numbered houses may water as much as they wish on odd-numbered dates, and even-numbered houses on even dates.

Original plans called for a steel pipe link to tap the vast water resources of Sooke Lake. But labor troubles in Australia delayed the freighter Cumulus, carrying the pipe from the Antipodes to the west coast. At the last count the vessel was 18 days behind schedule.

Mayor Hugh Stephen, Chairman of the Greater Victoria District Water Board, said this morning the lake-tunnel link had to be in operation by July 20 if a serious water crisis was to be averted.

The earliest the steel pipe could be operational was July 25, and that, only if everything went smoothly.

IN TROUBLE

"Not that we would have run out of water," Stephen said. "But without the lake-tunnel link we would have trouble maintaining supplies in the city after July 25. Had the dry weather continued there is little doubt that by July 20 all garden and lawn watering would have to be totally banned with the only use permitted that for toilets and washing.

With delivery of the concrete pipe to replace the steel pipe on route from Australia Stephen said the area's water problem would be ended for many years to come.

The concrete pipe will be a permanent installation and will be operational on or before July 15, five days before the deadline.

Stephen said original plans called for 2,600 feet of steel pipe costing $116,000. The new plan calls for 2,500 feet of concrete pipe for the most vital link and 1,000 feet of steel pipe to be installed after the freighter eventually reaches Vancouver. Total cost is expected to be $127,000.

Stephen noted that the steel pipe ordered and due for delivery in late July would not be wasted.

"The steel pipe ordered from the Victoria Machinery Depot will be held in stock for approximately 18 months and then used as the first stage of the pipeline which will eventually serve the Saanich peninsula," he said, "So we are not wasting any money, just, in effect, buying the first pipeline stage well ahead of time."

Band Tuning Up for Expo '70

The Canadian image in Japan is lumber, coal, minerals and other raw materials — not people, says Peter Boldt, principal of Oak Bay Junior Secondary School.

He's confident that the situation will change when the Oak Bay school band visits Osaka July 6 to 20 in 1970 as Greater Victoria representatives at Expo '70.

"These young people — 85 will be going, most of them Oak Bay Senior Secondary School and some from Boldt's — will represent our nation well. They're not only fine performers and scholars, they're the type of youngsters that will put Canada on the map as people."

Boldt is one of the adults who will accompany the band on its two-week stay in Japan.

Boldt said today he is confident the $35,000 needed to finance the trip will be found.

He praised the Oak Bay Kiwanis Club who have organized a July 1 walkathon to raise funds.

The Kiwanis project chairman, Jack McNeill, says his club hopes to raise $10,000 from the walkathon which will start at 10 a.m. at the park with Mayor Fred Hawes firing the starting gun.

The 10-mile walkathon will be around the borders of Oak Bay with check points set up at one-mile intervals and refreshments provided at the half-way mark.

Boldt says the band members are already getting down to the business of raising the extra $25,000.

"We have high hopes of getting good support, especially from the companies who export to Japan. This is a good opportunity for them to help sell Canada in a personal way."

Each band member will be asked to contribute $200 toward the costs and also work on money-raising projects.

"The projects," he said, "will probably include car-washes. We're also talking about a raffle on, perhaps, a building lot."

He also gave credit to the schools' band director, David Dunnet.

"He has worked endlessly to get this project off the ground. He's written innumerable letters to provincial, federal and Japanese officials."

The band will play at both the Canadian and British Columbian pavilions in Osaka and give up to six performances daily in the exposition's main amphitheatre.

Trapped Natal Miners Found Alive

By JOE WILL

NATAL (CP) — Three tough coal miners, who told rescuers they could have lasted three weeks longer, walked into the fresh air Sunday night after being trapped for more than 80 hours in a partially-flooded mine shaft.

Rescue came just hours after officials said hope was fading rapidly.

"We knew you would get us," Donald Evans told the men who clawed their way through 68 feet of solid coal in 15 hours Sunday after tapping sounds were heard.

Donald Evans, 54, John Krall, 57, both of Natal, and Frank Kutcher, 53, of Frank, were found by rescue crews at 7:55 p.m. PDT and walked out of the mine unaided just five minutes later.

The trio told rescuers they were buffetted by rising waters in the pit but managed to stay on their feet and fight their way to dry ground in a side shaft. They said they tried five possible escape routes but were blocked by washed out timbers and collapsed tunnels.

"They were really camped in down there," said mine manager Irv Morgan. "They used sack cloth we normally use for carrying ventilation pipes in the tunnels and made beds for themselves."

He said they fixed up a roof to keep the constantly dripping water off them.

"Hell, we were holed up in there," Evans told rescuers. "We could have lasted 21 days."

They were trapped shortly before noon Thursday when a party of 10 miners was blasting the roof of a small dome 1,700 feet from the entrance to the Balmer South mine operated by Kaiser Resources Ltd. in this southeastern British Columbia town just 15 miles from the Alberta border.

The blast tore through the roof of the shaft and into older workings that had since filled up with water. The crashing rubble and water killed three other miners. Four escaped.

Rescue workers heard faint tapping sounds at about 5:15 a.m. Sunday and they and the following shift clawed their way through in less than 15 hours.

"The men went through 68 feet of solid coal—more than a two-day job—in record time," said M. F. Clemmer, spokesman for Kaiser.

He said when the three men walked from the mine it looked as if they were going to work and not coming from it.

"It was the most beautiful thing in the world."

The men were in good spirits as they left the mine.

"We knew you would come to get us," Evans said.

"Wouldn't a beer taste good," said Kutcher.

"If you're going to the Kootenay get me one," Krall said to friends as the three miners headed for the Michel-Natal Hospital for a checkup.

About 3,000 people were gathered around the mine site when the three men walked out with their rescuers.

"They are three tough men," said Mr. Morgan.

He said the men had followed a schedule of tapping every two hours to let rescuers know they were alive.

"When we heard them we thought there was at least one alive. That three would be alive and well was beyond our wildest expectations."

Rescue workers scheduled to go off duty at 4 p.m. Sunday refused to leave and stayed on until the trapped men were freed.

"We could hear a tap . . . more like a thud. We'd hear it . . . then listen . . . then we couldn't hear it," rescue worker Bill Milburn of Fernie, B.C., said today.

"We were never sure what it was. It was never clear that it was someone banging," he said.

But it was enough to send the rescue workers to driving a 70-foot shaft through solid coal to the trapped men. The feverish last effort by the rescuers took 12 hours; drilling, blasting and removing debris.

As the last few feet were cleared away, Mr. Morgan, underground superintendent James Anderson and pit boss Arnold Webster were the first to CLOUD OF TEAR GAS is sprayed among demonstrators by policeman at Quebec Saturday as other officers moved in to disperse crowd at the Union Nationale party leadership convention. More than 3,000 protestors marched on the convention centre.

Bertrand Victorious After Violent Meet

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand was confirmed Saturday as Union Nationale party leader.

Delegates gave him a 389-vote margin over Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal during a weekend convention marred by demonstrations, bombings and charges of election-rigging.

Mr. Bertrand, interim leader since Daniel Johnson's death last fall, polled 1,327 against 938 votes for Mr. Cardinal. Twenty two votes went to Andre Leveille, a Montreal back-bencher.

Three violence incidents marked the arrival Friday of more than 2,000 delegates from Quebec's 108 ridings—a Molotov cocktail set furniture afire in a hotel lobby, a gunpowder bomb exploded in a mail box and two cars were set on fire.

Then Saturday, a few hours before the voting, the 30,000-member Quebec Civil Service Union marched on the convention site at the Coliseum. A two-hour skirmish between police and about 3,000 rock-throwing demonstrators ended when the marchers were sprayed with tear-gas. Three policemen were injured.

Police said 33 demonstrators were charged with disturbing the peace.

Cultural Affairs Minister Jean-Noel Tremblay, a strong supporter of Mr. Cardinal and a well-known Quebec nationalist, said after the vote that Mr. Bertrand's election had been rigged.

He charged at a news conference that the premier's campaign organizers had purchased votes and "the Mafia was there with money to threaten and to influence delegates."

Mr. Tremblay, who is prepared to work in Mr. Bertrand's cabinet "if he wants me", said two students told him they had been offered $1,000 each plus summer jobs at $100 a week if they voted for the premier.

He added that he was sure Mr. Bertrand was unaware of this and mentioned the name of a "notorious Montreal gangster" reported to be in town for the three-day convention.

GREAT VICTORY

"We won a great victory because our leader (Mr. Cardinal) collected 42 per cent of the ballots despite a rigged vote," Mr. Tremblay said.

In his victory speech, Premier Bertrand said it is important "to pull in the elbows because united we will win and we will defeat the opposition in the next election."

Mr. Cardinal said later he is prepared to remain in the party to fight for the ideas he endorsed during his leadership campaign "if our partisans think I can serve Quebec."

But the Cardinal cheering section in the 10,000-seat Coliseum wasn't very enthusiastic. Boos as well as insults greeted Mr. Bertrand as he walked up to the podium to appeal for party unity.

A group of Cardinal supporters, including the late Premier Daniel Johnson's 22-year-old son, Marc, indicated they would leave the party and join Rene Levesque's separatist Party Quebecois.

Phone Workers Out, Island Unaffected

A strike which sent more than 3,000 telephone workers off the job at lower mainland exchanges from Hope to Squamish at the weekend has not yet affected Victoria.

Island operations of B.C. Telephone could be affected, however, depending on progress toward settlement with the striking Federation of B.C. Telephone Workers.

The strike was called for the lower mainland at 6:30 a.m. today after contract negotiations collapsed Saturday.

First pickets appeared at 6:40 a.m. at the B.C. Telephone plant in suburban New Westminster, and within 30 minutes switchboard operators in downtown Vancouver and two other operations left their posts.

The strike is a rotation affair, the union has said, meaning only some employees walk off the job at first, while the remainder continue to work.

Later the strikers will return to work and the others will leave their jobs.

As switchboard operators left their places this morning and those coming on shift refused to cross the picket lines, supervisory personnel took their places to maintain service.

A similar process would likely take place in Victoria should the strike spread to this region, said Glynn Jones, area spokesman for B.C. Telephone.

"The federation has not yet given us any indication as to what they plan to do next, but the strike has not so far affected Victoria or any part of the Island.

"The union has indicated, however, that any strike here would be on a rotation bases. Supervisory personnel are being used effectively on the mainland, and have been alerted they would be used the same way here to maintain service," Jones said.

Troops Cut By Canada

Reduction Over 3 Years

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Leo Cadieux announced today that Canada's armed forces will be reduced to a strength of 80,000 to 85,000 during the next three years. Present strength is about 98,000.

Mr. Cadieux told the Commons that the government will concentrate wherever possible on reducing administrative and support activities to provide a higher ratio of operational to non-operational personnel than in the past.

This entails a re-examination of command and control activities with a view to reducing the headquarters staff, including that in Ottawa.

Mr. Cadieux said it is planned to reach the new manpower levels without introducing a program of forced attrition.

"We fully recognize that this will result in some temporary personnel imbalances within certain trades and specialties, but we are confident these can be overcome by making available opportunities for retraining."

Maritime Command will continue in the anti-submarine role, using most of the existing equipment, he informed the House.

CONSIDER MORE STEPS

However, the government was considering a replacement aircraft for the sub-hunting Argus, now operating from Maritimes bases.

The possibility of widening the roles open to maritime forces was being explored "in response to the government's policy directive."

"In particular, we expect more emphasis will be placed on activities relating to Canadian sovereign interests in our adjacent waters, and the sea bed," said Mr. Cadieux.

"In this context our Arctic territories take on particular significance."

Mobile Command will continue to be organized in combat groups and the Canadian airborne regiment, kept on standby in Canada for possible use abroad under the United Nations, is being retained.

STOCK SALES TUMBLE TOWARD RECORD LOWS

The Toronto Stock Market plunged to a record drop for trading in one day late this afternoon.

Markets elsewhere also declined significantly.

The Toronto index closed down 4.57 at 173.78. The New York index was 870.86, down 5.30. See complete market summaries on Page 8.

France to Keep Independent Line

PARIS (AP)—Maurice Schumann, France's new foreign minister. dampened today any idea that his appointment might mean a change in the policies of Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

"The foreign policy defined by the founder of the Fifth Republic will be carried out by the new government," Schumann told the opening of a world medical assembly. He said this policy, based on the independence of France and of Europe, served the peace of the world.

Schumann, 58, once resigned from a Gaullist government after De Gaulle rejected British entry into the Common Market without telling his ministers in advance. But Schumann, known as the voice of France on BBC during the war years, later reconciled with de Gaulle and took another ministerial job in 1967.

The new cabinet, appointed Sunday by President Georges Pompidou on the recommendation of Premier Jacques Chaban-Delmas, meets for the first time today at Elysee Palace.

Schumann succeeds Michel Debre, a hard and pure Gaullist. Debre had wished to remain at the foreign ministry to oversee execution of De Gaulle's ideas, but as a compromise finally agreed to become defence minister. In his new job, Debre is No. 2 man to Chaban-Delmas.

There are those who thought Schumann's appointment, and that of Valery Giscard d'Estaing as finance minister, heralded the beginning of a new liberal era in French foreign policy.

DID NOT BREAK

One of the co-founders of the now-defunct Mouvement Republicain Populaire, a Roman Catholic party that sought European unity after the Second World War, Schumann strongly disapproved of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's decision to keep Britain out of the Common Market. But he never broke with the general over it.

Giscard d'Estaing had been finance minister under De Gaulle from January, 1962, to January, 1966, but then helped form a splinter group called Independent Republicans who said they were basically for De Gaulle but reserved the right to disagree with him.

Giscard d'Estaing is known to favor both British entry into the Common Market and political integration in Europe. He took the job after former premier Antoine Pinay, also an Independent Republican, turned it down Saturday despite Pompidou's urging.

Sprinter Smith More Human Than Symbol

By STEVE HUME

Symbols, especially when they are people, have a disturbing way of becoming more human the nearer you get to them.

Tommie Smith, Black Power athlete who got bounced from the U. S. Olympic team for advocating from the Mexico City victory stand the social philosophy that has millions of white Americans quaking in their boots, lost a big chunk of his fire-breathing image Saturday.

He showed up to run the Y-Times International 220-yard dash looking like someone modelling the latest thing in sweatsuits for a Playboy magazine take-out, and he left looking just as cool and unruffled.

In between he managed to sign autographs, talk with a gaggle of awed youngsters hanging around from morning age-class competition, slip in an official introduction to the crowd, and tie Harry Jerome's existing meet record with a fluid ease that stunned the 2,000 spectators at Centennial Stadium.

Warming up among the rank and file athletes, his blue Pan Am Games sweatsuit holding no measure of anonymity, he looked like a thoroughbred, rangy, loose, packed with latent speed and capable of a world record any time he wanted one.

But he didn't come on like the aloof, taut, high-strung stereotype of a super-star is supposed to act.

He had a genial grin for anyone who spoke to him, and time to talk with kids, coaches, officials and fans alike.

When he sauntered up to the meet recorder and asked with an easy smile, "So who've we got to run with me?" nobody took it as the supercilious insult of a super-athlete at a provincial track meet.

It was rhetorical question, nothing more, for it didn't really matter who was running in the race.

And when the 25-year-old, 180-pound athlete got onto the track with his red and blue U.S. singlet and shorts, everyone knew it was a rhetorical question.

Smith looked almost lazy coming out of the fourth lane blocks with a relaxed stride and loose arm-motion.

Then, halfway through the turn his knees came up and he exploded into a blinding acceleration that left 9.5 hundred sprinter Larry Matthews of Tacoma floundering 10 yards behind.

It was an incredible burst of speed reminiscent of last year's Olympic Preview

Fire Hazard Drops Sharply After Widely Spread Rain

"GOOD HEAVENS", worries three-year-old Roberta Olmstead, 2622 Rose. After so many days of sunshine the feel of falling rain seemed almost a new experience for a little girl. But for many Victorians, weary of a long month of little moisture, it was a welcome sight. (Bill Halkett photo.)

By STEVE HUME

Rain and a mass of extremely moist air over most of the province brought relief to a 2,500-man army battling 324 forest fires at the weekend.

The British Columbia Forest Service reported the number of active blazes throughout the province is down to a total of 284 today, and the number of men on the actual fire line has been reduced to 1,400.

Spokesman Ray Wormald said rain has reduced over-all provincial fire-hazard ratings from extreme Saturday to low and moderate this morning.

"All fires are currently quiet, and mopping up operations are going ahead very quickly, with fire-fighters taking full advantage of the break in the weather to get new, more elaborate fireguards built."

He said the heavy overcast covering most of B.C. will not halt water-bombing operations by eight aircraft and a number of helicopters equipped with monsoon buckets.

A total of 65 bulldozers are also still engaged in support operations.

Meanwhile, the weather system that means sighs of relief for grimy, embattled firefighters promises glum days ahead for Victoria sun worshippers, the weather office reports.

Entire Province Under Cloud

Weatherman Alan McQuarrie said this morning a Pacific maritime cold front moving over the province means showers everywhere in B.C., but mostly in coastal regions.

All of the province is currently under cloud cover, he said, and Victorians can expect only partial clearing with continuing cool westerlies and low temperature in the mid 50s and low 60s during the next week.

He said that although most showers will be restricted to coastal regions, westerly winds will push moist, saturated air into interior and northern areas, which should retard any spread of current fires.

The moist air has helped so much in coastal areas that the Vancouver fire district, which includes Vancouver Island, has reported only 12 fires and a moderate hazard rating.

And that means sun-lovers are outnumbered 2 to 1 as loggers prepare to return to the woods with the possibility of the lifting of restrictions.

"It's quite likely certain restrictions will be lifted in Vancouver Island logging areas if cooler, wetter weather continues, the forest service spokesman said, but he would not speculate on the possibility of a government lift of Zone One regulations today.

In the meantime, rain varying from light to "lots of it" sent loggers back to work early today as operators awaited word from the B.C. forest service before opening regular schedules.

TOO QUICK A RESPONSE TO PRAYERS

They prayed for rain at the Sunday morning service in St. John's Anglican Church—rain to quench the fires that are threatening B.C. forests.

The local response was immediate. It rained all afternoon and almost washed out the church's family picnic at Esquimalt Lagoon.

"But we carried on regardless," a member of the congregation said.

NEW ZEALAND High Commissioner to Canada, Dean Eyre, is in Victoria as part of a week-long visit to British Columbia. He was a guest at Government House today, and will meet Premier Bennett Tuesday. After two speaking engagements in Vancouver on Thursday, he will visit Kamloops Friday and stop in provincial capitals on his way back to Ottawa to talk with the premiers and lieutenant-governors of the prairie provinces.

FORSEY
. . . 'outrageous'

'Frustration Knocks Out Brightest'

A former University of British Columbia president said today some of the best university students are dropping out because of frustration either from the way the universities are run, what they teach or how they teach it.

Dr. Norman MacKenzie, also a former Canadian Senator, made his comment at the beginning of a two-day University of Victoria symposium on the role of the university in contemporary society.

●

"Why is it that some of our brightest people don't find in the universities what they want to do, and end up by dropping out in frustration?

"Among those who fail only five per cent do not have the intellectual capabilities to work in an academic environment."

Dr. MacKenzie pointed out that 33 per cent qualify for university education, but the actual number of people who manage to get one is far lower.

He spoke from the floor during a question period following a speech by labor relations expert Dr. Eugene Forsey, a Carleton University professor.

Dr. Forsey said many students come unprepared for university work, and blamed the public school system.

He cited the example of students who are unable to write well:

●

"It's outrageous that people like this should be let loose upon the universities."

Dr. Forsey said while professors and graduates of universities may bring about social, political and economic change, the institution itself is not an instrument of change.

"It is the function of the universities to provide professional training, but it should also be their function to provide professional education.

"And in this respect they appear to me somewhat deficient—for one thing, they let in too many people who are incapable, or ill prepared, or both.

"But against these difficulties every university should exercise unceasing vigilance, practise unceasing self-criticism, wage unceasing war."

●

In answer to a question from Vancouver Sun publisher Stuart Keate, Dr. Forsey said McGill University lecturer Stanley Gray should not have received a Canada Council grant for political science studies.

Gray was fired by McGill earlier this year for leading student demonstrations on the Montreal campus, and his grant came under fire from members of Parliament.

Bryant Insists Secret Sessions Will Continue

By SUSAN RILEY

Esquimalt council will continue to hold closed committee meetings, Mayor Ray Bryant said today.

At closed committee of the whole meeting, council tried to restrict discussion to "proper matters" but "sometimes a counsellor may bring up something he forgot to mention" at the open council meeting.

Mr. Bryant said this was an exception.

"Proper matters" for secret discussion, according to Bryant and the Municipal Act include land aquisition, and staff and personnel matters.

He said council also deals with many matters involving the provincial and federal governments which they request be kept confidential.

MORE THAN SAANICH

Esquimalt holds more secret meetings than Saanich, for example, because the municipality deals with the defence department more than any other municipality, he said.

About 25 per cent of the municipality's population work for the department.

Tonight council will hold no closed committee of the whole meeting.

Except for one April meeting the semi-monthly council meetings have been followed by secret sessions since October.

"It is strictly a co-incidence that we are not having a committee of the whole meeting tonight," said Bryant. He said there was nothing to discuss which merited a committee of the whole meeting.

NOT AUTOMATIC

He said Esquimalt was not like Oak Bay which, until last week, automatically made all committee of the whole meetings secret.

"Esquimalt council always passes a motion in advance before resolving itself into a committee of the whole, "and the press have been asked to leave and they normally do."

He said discussions of assessments, which Oak Bay kept secret, should be held in open council.

TAKES LONGER

He said closed committee meetings in Esquimalt often last longer than open council meetings which precede them because aldermen are more relaxed when they don't have an audience.

"When things are informal, discussion aften takes longer."

Esquimalt's A committee meetings, dealing with fire, finance and zoning are open to the press Bryant said, except for certain matters which must be excluded in the public interest.

"I don't see that our situation in Esquimalt is any different from that in Saanich," said Bryant. In Saanich council goes into secret session for land acquisition and personnel discussions.

He said he hopes the press and council don't "declare war on each other" over the matter of secrecy and public interest.

CAR TEST EXTENSION RULED OUT

There will be no extension of the July 1 deadline for the testing of all motor vehicles in Victoria at the provincial testing station.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson announced today the July 1 deadline would remain in effect.

Up to the end of May 67,279 of an extimated 80,000 vehicles registered in the Greater Victoria area have been approved at the testing station.

"This is a relatively high percentage," said Peterson.

"The station has not been too busy lately," he added.

A spokesman for the attorney-general's office said no regulations specifying exactly what will happen to drivers caught on the road without a provincial sticker after July 1 have yet been sent to Victoria police.

"We're looking on the positive rather than the negative side," the spokesman said.

WARMING UP for his Shrine Circus act, Benny Cristiani is forced into Memorial Arena corridor while men set up three rings and lion cages on the arena floor for shows today at 4 p.m. and 8 p.m. Handstand is executed under the watchful eye of aerialist Petrova Luvas. There will be two more performances of the circus Tuesday.

HOSPITAL VOTE BY YEAR'S END

Greater Victoria ratepayers will be asked before the end of 1969 to decide whether to spend an estimated $20 million to $30 million on acute care hospital beds in this area.

The total amount of the expenditure was discussed this morning by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark and the advisory committee to the Capital Region Hospital District Planning Board.

Neither Loffmark nor committee chairman Dr. A. C. Pickles, would comment on the total amount after their hour-long meeting.

★

"It will be a whopper," said Dr. Pickles.

Loffmark said he has heard estimates ranging from $20 million to $30 million.

"I don't want to guess, however," he said. "I don't want in any way to inhibit the advisory committee's planning."

Pickles and Loffmark agreed that the roles of the province and regional boards were clearer after the meeting.

Loffmark said the only condition laid down to the advisory committee was that at least 75 acute care beds for Saanich must be included in the new referendum.

The acute care beds along with 75 extended care beds already approved, will be located in a new hospital to be built north of Elk Lake.

★

"All recommendations on extended care beds have been accepted in principle," he said.

"There is a hold-up on siting in two cases, but this should be cleared up very shortly."

Loffmark said there was agreement that the new referendum should be in general terms with specific allocations left up to the committee.

Water Crisis Evaporates As Concrete Pipe Arrives

By JIM HUME

Greater Victoria's potential water crisis was ended over the weekend with the first deliveries of 2,500 feet of concrete pipe from Portland, Oregon.

The pipe, purchased for $94,000, will be installed to link Sooke Lake with the Sooke tunnel.

Delivery of the pipe, plus the present wet weather, has eliminated the total ban on watering between the hours of 1 p.m. and 5 p.m.

As of today odd-numbered houses may water as much as they wish on odd-numbered dates, and even-numbered houses on even dates.

Original plans called for a steel pipe link to tap the vast water resources of Sooke Lake. But labor troubles in Australia delayed the freighter Cumulus, carrying the pipe from the Antipodes to the west coast. At the last count the vessel was 18 days behind schedule.

Mayor Hugh Stephen, Chairman of the Greater Victoria District Water Board, said this morning the lake-tunnel link had to be in operation by July 20 if a serious water crisis was to be averted.

The earliest the steel pipe could be operational was July 25, and that, only if everything went smoothly.

IN TROUBLE

"Not that we would have run out of water," Stephen said. "But without the lake-tunnel link we would have trouble maintaining supplies in the city after July 25. Had the dry weather continued there is little doubt that by July 20 all garden and lawn watering would have to be totally banned with the only use permitted that for toilets and washing."

With delivery of the concrete pipe to replace the steel pipe on route from Australia Stephen said the area's water problem would be ended for many years to come.

The concrete pipe will be a permanent installation and will be operational on or before July 15, five days before the deadline.

Stephen said original plans called for 2,600 feet of steel pipe costing $116,000. The new plan calls for 2,500 feet of concrete pipe for the most vital link and 1,000 feet of steel pipe to be installed after the freighter eventually reaches Vancouver. Total cost is expected to be $127,000.

Stephen noted that the steel pipe ordered and due for delivery in late July would not be wasted.

"The steel pipe ordered from the Victoria Machinery Depot will be held in stock for approximately 18 months and then used as the first stage of the pipeline which will eventually serve the Saanich peninsula," he said, "So we are not wasting any money, just, in effect, buying the first pipeline stage well ahead of time."

BOLDT
. . . $35,000 needed

Band Tuning Up for Expo '70

The Canadian image in Japan is lumber, coal, minerals and other raw materials — not people, says Peter Boldt, principal of Oak Bay Junior Secondary School.

He's confident that the situation will change when the Oak Bay school band visits Osaka July 6 to 20 in 1970 as Greater Victoria representatives at Expo '70.

"These young people — 85 will be going, most of them Oak Bay Senior Secondary School and some from Boldt's — will represent our nation well. They're not only fine performers and scholars, they're the type of youngsters that will put Canada on the map as people."

Boldt is one of the adults who will accompany the band on its two-week stay in Japan.

Boldt said today he is confident the $35,000 needed to finance the trip will be found.

He praised the Oak Bay Kiwanis Club who have organized a July 1 walkathon to raise funds.

The Kiwanis project chairman, Jack McNeill, says his club hopes to raise $10,000 from the walkathon which will start at 10 a.m. at the park with Mayor Fred Hawes firing the starting gun.

The 10-mile walkathon will be around the borders of Oak Bay with check points set up at one-mile intervals and refreshments provided at the half-way mark.

Boldt says the band members are already getting down to the business of raising the extra $25,000.

"We have high hopes of getting good support, especially from the companies who export to Japan. This is a good opportunity for them to help sell Canada in a personal way."

Each band member will be asked to contribute $200 toward the costs and also work on money-raising projects.

"The projects," he said, "will probably include car-washes. We're also talking about a raffle on, perhaps, a building lot."

He also gave credit to the schools' band director, David Dunnet.

"He has worked endlessly to get this project off the ground. He's written innumerable letters to provincial, federal and Japanese officials."

The band will play at both the Canadian and British Columbian pavilions in Osaka and give up to six performances daily in the exposition's main amphitheatre.
